MONDAY VOTE ON SUBSIDY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Following Senator Jones admission draft for the subsidy bill, Senator Borah suggested it was needless to wait until Monday, in view of the surrender of the subsidy forces.

"Why not vote now?" asked Borah. "It seems to me the record has been pretty well made but it is not complete enough; why not complete it now?"

Senator Robinson, democratic leader, then suggested a vote be taken at once on a motion to recommit, but Jones said he would insist that his motion be disposed of first.

Jones' statement, however, had removed the last doubt that all further effort to pass subsidy at his session has been abandoned.

Shortly after Jones' announcement, the senate began voting on motions affecting the final disposition of the subsidy. By a vote of 46 to 38 the senate voted in favor of taking up the subsidy. This, supported by opponents of the subsidy, paved the way for the motion to recommit the bill.

Senator Robinson moved to recommit the bill, but under an agreement the vote went over until Monday. The senate, under the agreement, turned from the subsidy and took up calendar bills.

URGES WOMEN AT HANGINGS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 24.—Women should witness hangings to save their sons from the gallows, Mrs. F. Bernhard, who saw the slayer of her son go to his death in the jail here, declared today.

"Mothers would realize the awfulness of it all and instead of playing bridge and dancing and going to clubs, would give more attention to the rearing of their boys," said Mrs. Bernhard. "This would save many of them from the hangman's noose."

Many cases which result in hangings are traceable to improper rearing, Mrs. Bernhard believes. Proper home environment is the big factor and it cannot be obtained when the mother is busy with social duties and neglects the child, she said.

While Mrs. Bernhard talked in a calm manner of Clement Apolinar's execution, Mrs. Jeff Herd, mother of the dead man, sat along beside the casket of her son in the little undertaking parlor from which the funeral will be held Sunday.

"He was crazy, the law should not have hanged my baby," she moaned. "He didn't know what he was doing. They should have placed him in an asylum. Since he was a little boy he has had those 'spells'."

POCAHONTAS' HEART BROKEN

RETURN OF CAPTAIN SMITH TO HER LIFE A SHOCK.

Had Loved Adventurer and Only When Told He Was Dead Would She Consent to Wed Rolfe.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The career of Pocahontas, the Indian princess, in London was short, glorious at first and tragic toward the end.

In connection with the movement to exhume her body and send it back to the United States, for suitable burial, old libraries are being searched and stories about the savior of Jamestown reprinted.

It is told how at a reception in her honor she was confronted with Capt. John Smith, former leader of the Jamestown colony, whom she had believed dead.

She did not speak for two hours after the meeting. Her health was wrecked, and as a last desperate measure King James had a royal ship prepared to take her back to Virginia. As she was embarking, she fell a victim to smallpox and, not caring whether she lived or died, succumbed within a couple of days.

Pocahontas was twelve years old when, in the spring of 1607, the Jamestown settlement was begun. Her royal name was Matoaka. The little Indian girl fell in love at first sight with Capt. John Smith, veteran of campaigns in most parts of the world, altho still young. And Pocahontas was not his first conquest. He had been beloved by many women. Captain Smith admired the child and often wrote of his fondness for her. But, a bachelor to his death, the thought that the little girl might have selected him for her love never entered his mind.

Told that Smith Was Dead.

Capt. John Smith returned to England. Then John Rolfe fell in love with her. She had declared she would never marry. But someone spread the story that Captain Smith, her hero, was dead, and after a year of pleading she accepted the hand of Rolfe, an officer of the Jamestown company.

Pocahontas was converted and baptized, and married. Her marriage brought peace to the colony. Then two years after her marriage, John Rolfe brought his Indian princess to England, with her baby boy—the progenitor of the descendants of Pocahontas in England and America. Pocahontas brought along with her some Indians of the tribe. One of them, a military aide of Powhatan, had been ordered to count the number of the English, in case Powhatan ever hapepned to go to war with them.

Pocahontas—Lady Rebecca she was called following her baptism—received a greeting due to a royal princess. King James and his consort entertained her, and showed her the sights of London.

Capt. John Smith at this time had settled down at Brentford, just outside of London. It was a favorite vacation resort, and Lady Rebecca was taken there to rest following the strenuous London season.

Capt. John Smith, unaware even of the kindling the spark of love in the little Indian girl's breast, paid the Lady Rebecca a visit.

Unable to Speak.

She was unable to speak to him. She averted her head. Two hours later she uttered her first words after the meeting—to ask if she might call him father. Smith granted her request.

Pocahontas' heart was broken. She canceled all plans, and arrangements were made to take her back to Virginia in a royal ship. The ship was anchored at Gravesend, and Pocahontas and her party, the mother bidding good bye to her baby son who was to be left with members of the Rolfe family to be brought up in England, drove down in carriages from London.

By the time the party reached Gravesend, Pocahontas had contracted smallpox. She died within a couple of days, asking for Captain Smith.

In those days smallpox was a deadly scourge. Pocahontas was hurriedly prepared for burial, and, after a service at St. George's church, she was laid in a place of honor—the rector's crypt. There she still lies, all but forgotten by the descendants of the colonists who, with her aid, won a foothold in the new world.

FRUSTRATE GOLD LEAF PLOT

Three Men Giving Names of Burton, Bullock and McLane Arrested at Denver.

DENVER, Feb. 24.—An alleged plot to rob the Denver museum of $90,000 worth of leaf gold was frustrated with the arrest last night of three men giving the names of C. H. Burton, Tom Bullock and C. E. McLane.

The trio, according to police, admitted having planned to break into the museum. They were to slug the night watchman, they said, and blow the safe containing the gold leaf.

An automobile in possession of the men contained a rope, blankets, arms and ammunition, as well as explosives, police said

SUGGESTION TO MR. LONG

Valkyries Urge That College Book Store Man Advance No More Money for "Evening Shun."

The girls' senior-junior society, the Valkyries, the society first to protest against the tone of the student publications at the University of Nebraska, wishes to make the following public suggestion to E. H. Long of the College Book store. Their suggestion is that whatever be the stand taken by the national delegate of the men's journalism fraternity, to whom has been passed the decision as to the fate of this organization at Nebraska, Mr. Long finance no more "Evening Shuns" for university night. In the past he has each time advanced the funds for the publication of the "Shun," issued by the men's journalism fraternity, and the proceeds of the sale of the sheet have gone to the Y. M. C. A. The Valkyries think that if Mr. Long ceased to pay for the publication of the objectionable sheet, the issuing of it might be stopped more easily.

PLAN INTENSIVE GROUP

New Farmers Alliance, Headed by Townley, to Function Much as Nonpartisan League.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 14.—The new organization of farmers, headed by A. L. Townley proposes to:

Organize the farmers into precinct units on an intensive organization plan much like that of the nonpartisan league.

Cause farmers to keep accurate accounts as to crop acreage and costs, with quarterly meetings of precinct units to compare costs of individual farmers and make reports to general headquarters on the acreage and cost of production of each crop in each crop area.

Establish a central bureau to compile statistics thus gathered, study market and price conditions and issue periodical information and adivce to members as to acreage to plant and favorable time for marketing.

"In brief," said Mr. Townley, "the plan is to get cost of production by each member of local and general acreage, price and marketing conditions.

"The organization will be started in several states at once. It is non-political and non-partisan and will take no hand in politics."

Twelve men were named on a national committee at a meeting here last night. They are: N. K. Wicks, Brantford, N. D.; Dan Eliason, Crooks, S. D.; Herman Meyers, Hooper, Neb.; C. J. Diedrich, Selden, Kas.; O. S. Evans, Neosha, Mo.; L. J. Kalvig, Kanasha, Ia.; Louis Larson, Harris, Minn.; W. L. Andrews, Geneseo, Ill.; Arthur T. Harvey, Billings, Mont.; T. L. Crews, Eureka Springs, Ark.; O. M. Tronans, Boise, Idaho and D. W. Hollywood, Arapahoe, Col.

Articles of association of the alliance were drawn and signed by all present. An initiation fee of $4 and quarterly dues of $1 per member were provided for.

WARM WEATHER AT OMAHA

OMAHA, Feb. 24.—Overcoats were doffed, heavyunde rwear cast aside, reservations for Florida cancelled and a search for last year's Panamas made when the thermometer here shot up to 2 degrees warmer than the government bulb at Jacksonville, Fla., registered today.

At 7 a. m. the mercury reached 44. At noon it had climbed to 46. With the exception of the western portion of the state, the warmth is shared by all Nebraska. Valenine reported 26 above.

The prediction is for fair and somewhat cooler weather tonight and Sunday.

RULES MUSIC IS NOT WORK

Chicago Judge Decides That Playing Is Play and Not Labor.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—A court ruling that a musician isn't a workman brought acquittal for Joseph F. Winkler, head of the Chicago federation of musicians, today in his trial on charges of attempted extortion.

Winkler was accused under the so-called Dailey act, "an act in relation to extortion for purposes of settling disputes between workmen." Judge Joseph B. David ruled that the act cannot apply to the musicians' union, since "musicians are artists, not workmen."

"A musician isn't a workman," the judge exclaimed. "He doesn't work; he plays. Any musician would resent being called a workman."

The judge looked at Burt Earle, the complaining witness, head of a stage troupe of musicians.

"Isn't that true, Mr. Earle?" he asked

"Oh, no," said Earle.

"Tut, tut," said the court. "Of course a musician isn't a workman. Am I not right, gentlemen?" This to the lawyers in the case.

"No, you're not," they replied in chorus.

The judge stuck to his point, nevertheless. He ordered all the state's evidence stricken out as irrelevant and instructed the jury to bring in a verdict on what was left.

The case grew out of a strike called at the Chateau theater by Winkler.

PAPA MAY NOT BE SO EASY

Wires in Regard to Eloping Daughter Held at Bluffs.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 24.—"Hold Clara until we come."

This was the terse and significant reply of Elbert Comes, farmer, of near Waverly, S. D., to a telegram sent him yesterday by Chief of Police J. C. Nicol of Council Bluffs, relative to what disposition should be made of seventeen-year-old Clara Comes, held in the Bluffs with Walter Brown, twenty-one, a farm hand with whom she eloped.

Clara, a bob-haired flapper of the "vamping" type, who was detained Thursday when she and Brown were taken from a hotel, had counted strongly on her ability to "handle father," but was apprehensive regarding her mother.

Her experience in jail has failed to cool her ardor, and she declares she will marry Brown "now or later." They came to Council Bluffs in a bright red flivver. Brown remains noncommunicative.

BRIEF STATE NEWS.

Wymore—The road running from Fairbury to Pawnee came under discussion at a meeting Thursday. It was decided that the line running directly east from Fairbury, thru Blue Springs and Burchard, was the most direct and best road to improve and use. The road will be marked in the near future, the colors being black and white with the words, "Fairbury-Pawnee-B Line." The committee appointed to look after the work was G. C. Catlin, Fairbury; J. W. Marples, Blue Springs and D. K. Cox, Burchard. Delegations from the towns on the route weer present, and refreshments were served.

Kearney—Citizens of Gibbon and vicinity have petitioned the county board of supervisors to build a new state aid bridge across the Platte river, south of Gibbon. The only wooden bridge in the county is in usage at this point. Last winter the bridge was closed for weeks, being considered unsafe while the ice pack moved. Similar experiences are the history of winters past, each involving heavy expenditures of funds for upkeep and repair. While no funds are available from the state at this time, application will be made and a new bridge built as soon as possible, the petitioners have been assured.

Kearney—The twelfth annual banquet of the Kearney chamber of commerce, held at the teachers' college gymnasium, brought out an attendance of four hundred men. Considerable illness prevailing accounted for the few vacant seats in the giant dining room. Speakers of the evening were J. T. Keefe, of North Platte; J. Ed. Fisher of Beatrice, state commander of the American Legion, and Judge W. D. Oldham of Kearney, who substituted for William Suhr of Grand Island. A. G. Bower acted as toastmaster.

Wymore—A new business enterprise for Wymore is the feed and produce store in the George Moll building or Decatur avenue, just west of the Markle theater. The proprietors came here from Beatrice and will handle all kinds of feed and produce.

Blue Springs—William Gravatt, miller in Black Brothers' mill here, who was severely injured six weeks ago, when he was buried under a pile of sacked flour, which fell on him, has been informed, after an X-ray examination, that the hip bone, which was broken, has set crooked, and that he will be a cripple permanently.

UNDERWORLD IS STAYING SILENT

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24.—The code of silence of the underworld today tightened about the "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hide" mystery murder which ended the life of Earle Remington.

In the hands of the police are all the elements of a solution, but thus far the solution has been precluded by the fact that the men who are believed to hold the key have themselves long been sought by the police.

The threads of the mystery today led to Hollywood, where a man doing a huge liquor trade in the film colony and who is believed to have been associated with the slain clubman and aviator, has disappeared.

A check of a number of those known to have been his clients revealed, according to the police, that he has not served their liquor wants since a day or so following Remington's death.

The liquor ring, with which Remington is believed to have been associated, conducts its operations from San Diego to Seattle, thru border-running and rum schooners sailing from the vicinity of Vancouver to coast ports, officers said.

Many well known liquor operators have left the city and their present whereabouts is unknown, according to police.

URGES AMERICA TO JOIN COURT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. — President Harding today asked the senate to make the nUited States a full fledged member of the permanent court of international justice at the Hague, which was established under the league of nations covenant.

In a message to the senate, the executive asked that assent be given to American adhesion to the protocol of the international tribunal.

Four reservations were suggested by Secretary of State Hughes in a letter accompanying the president's message. These were:

1. That it is understood action by the senate giving assent to the courts protocol does not involve any legal relation on the part of the United States to the league of nations or the assumption of any obligations under the league covenant.

2. That the nUited States be given the right to vote in the election of judges—a right now given only to those nations which are members of the league.

3. That the nUited States will pay its fair share of the expenses of the court.

4. That the statute of the court adjoined to the protocol not be amended without the consent of the league.

The president indicated these reservations would be accepted by the court and the league of nations.

Stating that "our deliberate public opinion today is overwhelmingly in favor of our full participation" Mr. Harding urged that the senate take action on his request at this session.

Negotiations for American participation have been in progress since the Washington arms conference, the message revealed.

"Such action would add to our own consciousness of participation in the fortunate advancement of international relationship and remind the world anew that we are ready for our proper part in furthering peace and adding to stability in world affairs," the president said.

Unusual significance was attached to this statement by observers here.

The president's action today came as a complete surprise to many senate leaders.

Threatening as it does to revive the old league of nations fight, it may be extremely difficult to obtain action on his request in the remaining days of this session.

STAGGERING SUM FOR DRY LAW

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Enforcement of the Volstead act would cost $620,756,596,000,000 in the next twenty-five years if the cost continues to increase at the present rate, Representative Gallivan, Massachusetts, declared in the house today.

"That is more money than the world has ever known," declared Gallivan, "and then I do not believe you would enforce prohibition."

Gallivan was discussing an appropriation for the department of justice to be used in the prosecution of violations of the Volstead act. He said appropriations for the department had increased 80 per cent since 1916 and cited testimony of officials showing 44 per cent of the time of district attorneys was consumed in prosecution of the liquor law.

MARKED CHANGE IN ATTITUDE

Washington Coming to Realize Just What Has Happened.

Arm of Enforcement, David Lawrence Says, Reaching Out for Big and Little Who Attempt to Transgress.

By David Lawrence.

(This is the sixth of a series of seven dispatches written after an exhaustive study of the prohibition question in which President Harding, Prohibition Commissioner Roy Haynes, Assistant Attorney General Willebrandt, Wayne D. Wheeler of the anti-scaloon league, Capt. W. A. Stayton of the national association opposed to prohibition and other leaders submitted to private interviews with the writer and gave their candid opinions on law enforcement and the outlook.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. (Copyright 1923, by the Journal.)—From one end to the other there comes often the whispered inquiry, "Do they—the high officials in Washington—obey the Volstead law themselves?"

Contrasting the situation which exists today with that which prevailed shortly after the eighteenth amendment was adopted, it is no exaggeration to say there has been a marked change. It took official Washington some time to realize what had happened. Now as the law enforcement agencies reach out to all classes of citizens to deprive them of intoxicating liquors, the demand that the law be enforced without discrimination is having its effect in the national capital itself.

The only liquor which can be legally possessed today is that which was made prior to January 1920. Any person who has replenished his stock since then is guilty of a violation of the Volstead act. Have members of congress and officials of the government had any liquors in their possession which were manufactured since the amendment was adopted?

Persons engaging in illicit sale of liquor have their bottles labelled with dates of pre-Volsteadian days. Even old issues of internal revenue stamps are reproduced to make bottles look genuine. There's no way of telling whether the liquor in any one's possession is old or new except by tracing it to the person who made the sale.

Congressmen Took Liberties.

Read the debates in congress and you will every now and then note that a "wet" member boasts of having supplies some of the dry voting member ship with a stimulant. Some members of congress have always kept a supply of liquor handy in case any of their callers felt distressed and needed first aid. The theory of these members has been that their own private offices were no different from their dwellings and that it was no violation of the Volstead law actually to drink an intoxicating liquor.

Perhaps the most perplexing phase of the situation on Capitol Hill is that of the members who vote "dry", but who drink intoxicants whenever they get a chance. Some of these men deplore their own lack of self-control, and every now and then express the wish that it is rendered impossible for them to get liquor. They believe in the theory of enforcement, but like many persons outside of official life they cannot easily repress habits of a lifetime.

Members of congress are immune from arrest and presumably their offices will never be raided. The anti-saloon league has discreetly refrained from urging any such search. The prohibition vote in congress might be imperiled if any attempt was made to bear down heavily on those members who vote dry, but continue their use of alcoholic beverages. This group is not numerically large, but its support is nevertheless valuable.

As for the prohibition officers of the executive branch of the government they have no jurisdiction over the members of congress; in fact they are embarrassed by the fact that other officers of the government are not obeying the Volstead act.

President Frowns on Violations.

President Harding has endeavored to correct this situation by his exhortations to officials to set an example to the rest of the nation. The knowledge that the president officially frowns upon violations of the Volstead act by officers of the government is beginning to percolate thru and will have an important effect on the situation before long.

Indeed, things are far different today from what they were two years ago. There is less drinking in public places or at semi-official functions by officials of the government. What may be consumed clandestinely is another thing, but no longer are officials to be seen imbibing with the freedom of a year or even a few months ago. An important influence on the local situation has been the disclosure of fake liquor. So much poisoned stuff has been seized that many who do not like the Volstead act are beginning to obey it thru fear of the "bootlegger's" wares.

No intoxicating beverages of any kind today are served at the white house table. Members of the cabinet have scrupulously refrained from patronizing "bootleggers." The lesser officials connected with law enforcement also know they are being observed, and they, too, are beginning to practice what they preach.

This does not mean that Washington is "bone dry." There are "bootleggers" plying their trade here as elsewhere. The embassies and legations are by diplomatic precedent regarded as foreign territory and hence not subject to the constitution or laws of the United States. Much of the talk of embassy liquor running freely is exaggerated. Some attaches have lent themselves to schemes of the "bootleggers" and frequently the latter have used servants and employes to aid in getting empty bottles and the use of diplomatic trucks and vehicles, but in the main the amount of embassy liquor finding its way into the hands of "bootleggers" for resale is very small indeed.

Embassies Make Presents.

No account of what is happening in Washington would be complete without mention of the custom of present-giving which some of the embassies and legations quietly observe. The foreign diplomats and their secretaries sympathize with the thirst of their American friends.

The writer talked with the ambassador here of one of the great powers who said he believed this was a bad custom, and he had issued strict orders to the members of his staff several months ago to abandon it. He

STATE STUNG ON STONE?

ARCHITECT ADMITS HE KNOWS NOTHING ABOUT IT.

Governor Says Stone May Give Desired Service But Price to Be Paid Is the Main Question.

From within the confines of the governor's office where the capitol commission met Friday afternoon comes the report that the commission took Secretary George E. Johnson to task for making public his report relative to the grade of the stone being placed in the exterior walls of the new capitol, and that the commission also took Bertram G. Goodhue to task for permitting the approval of stone not considered up to grade or wholly up to specifications.

The commission has a rule, whether wisely or unwisely adopted, closes the lips of members of the commission with the exception of the governor who is delegated to speak for the commission and to make public such matters as the commission desires published. This rule has existed since the time of the former administration. Mr. Johnson, as a member of that body, was taken to task for ignoring that rule in making public his report of an investigation of stone. Mr. Johnson explained that some of the newspapers obtained information of the investigation, and to treat all fairly he had given his report to all the daily newspapers.

Mr. Goodhue during the hearing was called upon to explain. He is alleged to have admitted he personally knew nothing about stone, tho he had representatives pass upon the stone at the quarry.

"I am very much disappointed, Mr. Goodhue," said W. E. Hardy of Lincoln, member of the commission. "We supposed you would protect the commission in all these matters."

It now develops that the state has had three inspectors on the job at the capitol. Goodhue as supervising architect thru his agent, has been approving the stone at the quarry. No one on the job at the capitol has rejected any of the material approved by the architect.

Governor Bryan said Saturday Mr. Harley and Mr. Head said they had received complaints about the stone, and the governor said he had been looking into the matter. The commission is said to have authorized Mr. Johnson to investigate. Mr. Johnson is having Professor Mickey of the university assist him. How so much of the stone now objected to came to be laid without hindrance is not explained. Mr. Johnson, being the only engineer on the board, has been looked to by others to protect the commission in matters relating to construction. His duties as secretary of the commission are said to be merely keeping records of the commission.

Governor Bryan said the proposed meeting of architect, commissioners and contracts within a week or two is mainly for the purpose of adjusting the price to be paid for the stone.

"The stone will give the desired service and will pass as to color, if the commission desires to accept it, providing it can be had at the right price. I except probably 10 per cent which may not test as to strength."

Mr. Johnson believes it should cost the state 35 cents a cubic foot instead of the contract price of 75 cents a foot.

The governor indicates that if 10 per cent of the stone laid is not up to standard for strength the low grade stones can be removed without much trouble. He said Mr. Mickey said he could tell them by sight and mark them. Some stones test 3,000 pounds

BANKER BILL IS APPROVED

BUT FOUR VOTES CAST AGAINST IN LOWER HOUSE.

Minority Leader Says This Is No Time to Rock the Boata nd Action Is Now the Thing That Is Necessary.

H. R. 272, the bill prepared by the bankers' association, was passed by the house Saturday morning, with but four dissenting votes. These were cast by Axtell of Lincoln, Broome of Sheridan, Davis of Fillmore and Wells of Jefferson, the first a progressive and the other three democrats. There were 80 votes cast in the affirmative.

Minority Leader Osterman, in casting his affirmative vote, said this was no time to rock the boat. The banking situation is such that action is needed. He felt that the senate and in the conference committee a bill will be evolved that will meet any objections to this one.

Axtell, in voting against it, said he did so because it is a bankers' bill and that the depositors have not been given a chance to express themselves. He thought it would result in a number of state banks nationalizing.

All the other democrats present voted with the republicans in attendance for the bill. Some feeling is privately expressed by democrats because Dr. Hall, when the committee hearing was held and he asked to speak, said he had nothing to say, and then later warned that the governor would veto the bill and that there would be a referendum on it if passed over his veto.

The house also passed H. R. 588, exempting telephone companies that have no switchboards and farm mutuals from making annual reports to the state railway commission. A similar law was passed some years ago, but in revising the statutes later the legislature left it doubtful whether it was in effect or not. The penalty for companies required to report and which do not cut from $500 to $50 as a minimum.

H. R. 124, by Noff, passed by 87 to 1. It requires railroads to gravel all roads for 75 feet on each side of a crossing, but in no event shall it be required to go beyond the limits of its right of way.

H. R. 212, found 74 supporters and 14 opponents. It reduces the carrying capacity of bridges, from 20 to 15 tons on federal highways and 15 to 10 tons on county roads. H. R. 433, passed 74 to 12, with the emergency clause attached. It provides that total expense of highway commissioner's office, including salary and office and traveling expenses, shall not exceed $15,000 a year. When county surveyor is made highway commissioner the maximum salary shall be $2400 a year. Strikes from present law the proviso making it unlawful in any county of more than 8,000 for any county board member to act as highway commissioner.

H. R. 453, an amendment to the workmen's compensation law, was passed 79 to 4. It provides that the failure of an employer to comply with the provisions of section 3069, if otherwise the employer has elected to come under the provisions of part 2 of the general act, will not constitute a bar to compensation, but in such event, the employe shall have the right of election to sue under the common law as modified by part 1 or for compensation under part 2.

LITTLE CHANGE IN SALARY

Teachers of State to Get About Same Compensation for Coming Year as for Last.

A schedule of salaries of Nebraska school superintendents and teachers elected for the coming year shows little change according to a report of the secretary of the state teachers association. The salaries of superintendents in forty-nine towns listed vary from $1183 at Plainview to $4,500 at Grand Island, with the average nearer $3,000. At eighteen towns the salary of superintendent shows an increase for the coming year; and at four towns, a decrease.

The general tendency for teachers salaries remains unchanged. A decrease in salaries is shown at one town, and a lower schedule for new teachers at another. Five small towns show an increase of salaries of teachers.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE IS STILL INTERESTED

F. A. High Wishes to Correct Impression That Organization Is Opposed to Any More Dry Legislation.

F. A. High, state superintendent of the Anti-saloon League of Nebraska has issued the following statement:

"It has just come to our attention that the impression has gone out that the anti-saloon league of Nebraska is opposed to the enactment of any more dry legislation.

"I wish to say that this impression is absolutely wrong. The anti-saloon league is very much interested in the measures that have been introduced which will strengthen our present dry laws.

"We are especially interested in the passage of the bill which has been introduced amending the Sackett law in accordance with the suggestion of Governor Bryan in his message to the state legislature. Every man and woman in the state who believes in the enforcement of law, dry laws as well as others, should give that amendment their hearty support."

Sadi Lecointe, the noted French flier, is reported from Paris as having established a new world's record for speed in a trial flight near Marseilles. He attained a speed of 234 miles an hour, or 377.66 kilometers. Leconte piloted a Nieuport-Delage plane.

LEGACY FROM RAIL STRIKE

DAUGHERTY INJUNCTION HEARING TUESDAY AT DENVER.

Officials and Employes of the Railways to Be Summoned to Tell About Strike Law Violations.

Assistant Attorney General Dickinson of the federal department, who has been holding hearings in federal court districts over the country in an effort to make the Daugherty strike injunction permanent, will conduct such a hearing at Denver next Tuesday.

For that purpose many witnesses from the railroads in this part of the country are being summoned to appear at that time and tell what they know about violations of the temporary injunction during the strike period. A large number of special agents of the roads will appear and officers of the mechanical and shop departments may be summoned.

It was understood Saturday that a number of Burlington men will be called to Denver for that hearing and that division representatives of the road will tell what they know about the observance of the law in their localities during that period by members and representatives of the striking unions.

The Daugherty injunction, issued in practically all the federal court districts of the country, made unlawful assemblages of strikers near the entrances to railway shops or grounds mass picketing and interference with railroad workmen.

ALL WHO ARE FOR TAX CUT

GOVERNOR BRYAN ASKS THEM TO HOLD UP THEIR HANDS.

Postal Card Referendum Vote to Deluge Legislators With Demand for His $9,000,000 Promise.

Governor Bryan has asked for what he calls a referendum vote to the taxpayers. He has asked them to vote for or against his plan to reduce the "taxes" $9,000,000 and to discharge 150 employes who are riding on the taxpayers back.

All in favor will say aye; contrary, no. The ayes have it.

He has asked taxpayers to drop a card to their legislators and to send him a copy of what they say. He proposes to deluge the legislature with postal card or letter direct from the voter. He promised the voters the result will be what they want it to be. He is not trying to interfere with the deliberations of a coordinate ranch of the state government. He simply wants to know how many voters desire him to save $9,000,000 in taxes and to discharge 150 tax eating useless employes. He says his forty-five bills for reorganizing the state government will do this. The decision is in the hands of the people. He says voters have got to be either for it or against it.

The present laws give the governor power to hire and fire all or any employes of the six code departments, and the present law, the budget law, now a part of the code law, gives him power to say how much of the appropriations made for any and all departments of the state government shall be expended or not expended, but the governor desires his forty-five bills passed. These give him the same power now held by him, to enforce laws under the code, to hire and fire all appointees or employes in the code departments. His bills provide for a new branch of government which he calls an executive council of five state officers of whom he is to be one, to determine "policies" he shall follow. In enforcing laws which the legislature may authorize him to enforce. Indicating that these "policies" are not of much importance Governor Bryan promises in advance of his knowing what these policies are to be that he will save $9,000,000 in the expenses of the state in the next two years. All in favor of this saving are requested to drop their lawmakers a card or letter and to call up their neighbors and ask them to do likewise.

The governor does not indicate whether he will resort to a real, genuine legal referendum if the legislature does not adopt his plan and should decide that some other plan is better and will in fact save more of the taxpayers money. Governor McKelvie said during the campaign that the discharge of every code appointee would cut the state levy only a few thousandths of one per cent. In discussing this Governor Bryan does not distinguish between state and local taxes and he confuses a reduction of expenditures with a reduction of taxes.

The Governor's Proposition.

To the Taxpayers of Nebraska: For the past two years you have been demanding a reduction in the cost of government. For two years you have been protesting the increase in your taxes and the increase in the number of tax-eaters on the pay rolls of this state. At the state election last November you elected me as governor of Nebraska by a majority of 50,000 votes. I told the voters during the campaign that I thought the taxes in this state could be reduced twenty per cent. I promised the taxpayers that if I were elected, I would do all in my power to cut out the duplications of government, to take off the pay rolls of the state all the useless tax-eaters possible, and to reduce the number of inspectors.

From the standpoint of the taxpayer the situation in the state legislature has now reached a crisis. In compliance with the demand of the taxpayers, and in accord with the pledges that I had made to them during the campaign, I have submitted to the legislature forty-five bills which provide for a reorganization of the state government. These bills, together with the recommendations made in my budget message to the legislature, provide for a reduction of $2,000,000 in taxes for the coming two years.

A KNOCK AT GAME YARNS

STORIES OF HUNTER PROWESS TO BE REDUCED.

Bill Reducing Fullness of Game Bag Advanced to Third Reading in Lower House After Long String of Oratory.

But one snipe may nestle in the hunter's game bag where two snipe nestled before. Once a famous hunter has bagged five prairie chicken or grouse, he shall call it a day and go home. And where he could throw lead poison into twenty-five ducks and ten geese in a day, provided he could find the ducks and the geese, now he can pour it into but ten and five respectively. These, at least, will be some of the existing conditions if H. R. 42, advanced to third reading in the house Saturday, becomes a law.

The sport will lose much of its charm for several reasons. The sportsman must cut down the size of his game stories. He may also cut down on the size of his game bag. For a time, it appeared that the hunter would be stripped of everything but his cap, coat and boots. It was proposed that the sawed-off or riot shotgun alone be used in the scaring of game. One member offered an amendment providing that duck callers and decoys, live and dead, be abolished. The automatic shotgun was sorely criticised for its deadly rapidity.

The bill is by Represesntative Keyes of Furnas. It cuts the bag for one day approximately in half. tI proposes to limit prairie chicken and grouse bagging to ten a day. And Representative Lundy put thru an amendment making it five. Here are other proposed reductions:

Plover from 25 to 15 per day.
Rails from 25 to 10.
Snipe from 25 to 10.
Ducks from 25 to 10
Geese from 10 to 5.
Brants from 10 to 5.
Coots from 25 to 10.

Mr. Keyes made a dramatic plea for the protection of wild bird life.

"I love the wild life and the birds," he said. "I can remember the prairie checken and the grouse by the tens of thousands. I can recall when the quail, gamest little bird that flies, was plentiful. I can remember when the buffalo roamed over these western plains. The white swan is gone."

Representative Ward, reared in the sand hill country said that prairie chicken and grouse were more plentiful last fall than at any time in years. And the same, he said, was true of ducks. The quail, he said, were not killed off. They were winter-killed and starved out. He said that big stories by hunters carried in newspapers, do much to cause misapprehension in regard to bird destruction.

Mr. Pollard spoke for the bill. He said that he has introduced in his county at his own expense, the ring-necked Chinese pheasant.

Representative Nelson indicated that stories told by the average hunters are much to the bunk. He said that not one in twenty-five is capable of going out and bagging the limit.

Representative Miner told of the passing of the deer and the antelope. Representative Broom told of the frequent finding of the dead soldier on the prairie after the hunter has come and gone. Representative Harrington expressed the opinion that the old time herds of buffalo would be out of place in the Nebraska pastures of today.

It was argued that the ducks and the geese are her today and gone tomorrow. They nest in the north and if the Nebraska hunter must sit in his blind and watch them go sailing away, it will be to the advantage of the Kansas and Texas hunter.

NEW YORK SITUATION SAID TO BE SERIOUS

Barges Carrying Coal Frozen In Hudson and Ice Jams Cut Off Supplies.

DEALERS' BINS ARE EMPTY

One-Half of Minimum Required Assured City.

MERCURY DROPPING RAPIDLY

Manhattan Island Is Ice Bound, With Plenty of Substitutes for Coal Clogged in the River.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—New York City is facing a "most desperate fuel situation" with the coldest weather of the winter at hand, the fuel administration announced today.

Barges carrying more than 100,000 tons of anthracite are frozen in the Hudson and ice jams have completely cut off these supplies.

Dealers' bins are practically empty and what little coal there is left is being saved for emergency prescriptions of the administration, it was said.

The best the city can expect is about one-half of the minimum amount of fuel counted on to carry thru the critical period of the winter, the administration officials asserted.

Manhattan Island is practically ice bound. Plenty of substitutes for anthracite are lying on the Jersey docks but the clogged river prevents moving them.

The mercury is dropping rapidly and zero is expected to be reached today.

The fuel administration has been counting on 60 per cent of last year's receipts to keep the city from suffering. With this amount of coal it has been necessary to use generous supplies of substitutes. At the present time there are almost no substitutes in the city.

The danger of trying to ship the coal across under the present conditions was shown yesterday when two barges were crushed and went down with 1,500 tons of coal.

Along the piers the jams of ice blocks from two to four feet thick are piled up higher than the tug decks.

LANGUAGE ACT ARGUED OVER

FOUR NEBRASKA ATTORNEYS IN SUPREME COURT HEARING.

Attorney General Spillman and Mason Wheeler Appear in Behalf of Reed-Norval Law and Mullen and Sandall Oppose.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—(Special)—Did the Nebraska legislature go too far when it enacted the foreign language law? Four brilliant Nebraska attorneys, two taking the affirmative and two the negative, strenuously argued the constitutionality of the measure yesterday before the highest tribunal of the land, the U. S. supreme court. Attorney General Spillman and Attorney Mason Wheeler argued for the law while Attorneys Arthur F. Mullen of Omaha and C. E. Sandall of York represented the appellants in opposition to the Reed-Norval act. Senator Hitchcock and Representative Jefferis, Omaha, were present during the entire hearing.

Attorney General Spillman quoted court decisions declaring it to be the established public policy of this country to abolish the general use of languages other than English at the earliest practicable date. The legislation now in effect is useful, he contended, in that it restricts foreign language instructions to children having less than eighth grade education, as they should first be well grounded in the language adopted by our own country. He stated that the foreign language law of Nebraska does not prohibit or restrict the exercise of religion in the Lutheran, Catholic or Jewish places of worship as some contend, nor the use of the so-called dead languages; nor does it prohibit the teaching of foreign languages except to children of inmature years. He pointed out that even religion was frequently used as a cloak for various purposes; polygamy, for instance. He asserted that the fourteenth amendment was in no wise violated by the foreign law of Nebraska.

Wheeler Quotes Decision.

Attorney Mason Wheeler quoted from the state supreme court decision, unholding the constitutionality of the law, a declaration that the church school involved in the controversy under which a conviction was obtained under the Norval-Reed law had deliberately changed its hours as a mere subterfuge to evade the statute which prohibited instruction in the German language to children not having at least an eighth grade education. He felt that the legislation was necessary to assimilate the foreign born population and to assist in the theory Americanization of these coming to U. S. shores. At least twenty-one states have passed laws similar to Nebraska, he emphasized. Speaking, writing and publishing of foreign newspapers are not prohibited by present Nebraska law, and that there is plenty of time for children to study foreign languages after they secured a basic knowledge of their own language, declared Mr. Wheeler. Present languages used in the U. S. are comparable to a modern tower of Babel, he added, and Nebraska is trying to make America 100 per cent American for Nebraska and other states cannot continue to safely exist 50 per cent German and 50 per cent American, or even 90 per cent American and 10 per cent German.

Arthur F. Mullen, Omaha attorney, called the attention of the court to the provisions of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution and alleged that the Nebraska foreign language law was clearly in violation of the amendment. Not only was religious training of the foreign speaking youths prohibited necessarily by the contested statutes, but the personal rights of the parents to hire tutors and to have their children taught religious training and foreign languages while their minds were more impressionable, was also forbidden under the Reed-Norval act.

Foolish Experiment."

"This law is a foolish experimentation with the fundamental and basic rights of citizenship, "he declared. "Both religious and property rights are thus invaded in sections two and three of the Norval act. Mental liberty is more important than physical liberty, and the former is certainly greatly restricted and prohibited in certain directions by Nebraska's foreign language law," concluded the Omaha attorney.

Attorney C. E. Sandall of York, Neb., himself formerly a member of the state legislature, arguing against the law, told the court that he was conversant with conditions in Hamilton county and had been for years; that tho it had a strong German population they were intensely loyal to the government even during the war period; that German and American boys enlisted side by side from that county in such large number as volunteers that the quota was exceeded without invoking the draft laws. That Meyer, the instructor who was convicted of violation of the Norval act had a state life certificate to teach, instructed students in the regular school branches as required by state laws and regulations, and during recesses and after regular school hours gave them bible history, including illustrative pictures appropriate to the subject matter.

Mr. Sandall felt that the foreign language law goes too far, tho he did not object to the first section. The second and third sections indicated that it was easy for a legislature to be arbitrary and capricious especially following a great war.

Much Interest Shown.

Attorneys and attendants visiting the supreme court said it was seldom that spectators retained their interest in the proceedings to the extent evidenced in the trial of the Nebraska foreign language statutes. Hardly a person moved during the entire course of the arguments presented by the Nebraska attorneys, tho ordinarily the audiences personnel will change two or three times during the course of a single hour, most of them being transient visitors. The court itself, individually and collectively, manifested unusual interest in every point presented by both sides, frequently interposing to ask questions as to the present compulsory education laws of Nebraska and the average age at which students usually complete common and high school courses. The decision will be a precedent for a great many similar cases pending in the lower courts of other states.

NOT TO PREVENT MERGER

Persons Interested in Armour-Morris Merger Believe Wallace's Opposiiton Not to Count.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Voiced opposition by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to the proposed merger of Morris with Armour, packers, will not prevent consummation of the deal in the opinion of interested parties here.

Announcement by Wallace that he would make a strong legal fight to prevent the merger, was regarded as favorable by the packers.

In the first place, they declared Wallace's stand would serve to quiet demands for an investigation by congress. It has already resulted in the tabling of the Voigt motion ordering the federal trade commission to probe the negotiations—the thing most feared by the packers.

Secondly, they declare court action by Wallace will result in showing the deal is legal.

In the meantime Armour continued to trim financial sails. Notes amounting to $65,000,000 will be retired within the next few months. Acquisition of Morris' business would greatly aid in the refinancing of Armour, officials of the latter company believe. Payment of the $30,000,000 asked by Morris stockholders would be on the basis of approximately 50 per cent in cash and the remainder in stock. Armour officials believe they would be able to handle the Morris business thru the Armour organization as it now exists and thus while greatly increasing their sales, would reduce overhead costs.

YOUR--- PROBLEMS

By Mary Gordon

Dear Mary Gordon: I am twenty-one years old and I am living in a small town. Some time ago I met a girl, four years my senior. We live in the same town, very close together, so I can see her very often. We hardly ever go to a dance or show for she thinks it sin, but she always Sundays, likes to go to church, as often as they meet.

Now this is my trouble, Mary, my friends don't like her, none of them, and call her the ugliest names they can think of. They tell me they knew her long before I did. She must have been always in trouble with people, or seemed to get along with nobody whom she lived with. She is kinda nervous but I can not see her faults bigger than anybody else's.

Now two months ago, her mother, whom she for the last two years has accompanied, died. Now she's getting awful lonesome and wants to marry, at least, in half a year.

But Mary, I'm not in a position to support a family, for in the last couple of years I could not save enough to keep a bird alive. And I really think I'm too young to be bound for life.

Now, Mary, what would you do in my place, would you think I'd better stop calling on her? Or leave things drive the way they are? I'd hate to give her up, for I like her very much. Hope you'll give me your much needed advice and advance my thanks.—Anxious.

A. If you continue calling on her, you must realize that it will end ultimately in marriage. Whether or not you wish to marry her, depends upon yourself alone. From what you say, I believe that you do not love this woman as much as a man should love his intended wife.

As to her disposition, you know that a girl seldom shows her worst side to the man she hopes to wed. If she really is unable to get along with people, her husband will probably be no exception. But you must not forget, either, that some people who show a crusty side to the world are ideal in the home. However, they are only too rare.

One more thing to take into consideration is the fact that this girl's neighbors may be prejudiced against her. Perhaps they are jealous of her. Perhaps she is in some way different from them and they envy and dislike her.

I'm afraid you must solve your own problem, Anxious. You are rather young to marry. And I congratulate you on your great good sense in being unwilling to assume the responsibilities of a family until you are able to support a home.

to the journal: What is the matter with the married wemen?

If a singie girl goes to a show or out with a friend and when she geturns a phone call has come while she is away and the next day some married woman calls on the phone and says you were out with my husband and if you try and lye out of it it will be proved and there will be something doing.

Maybe the same day another married woman will call and say my husband called you yesterday on the phone didn't he? and the poor girl tell the truth and says no he did not call me what do you take me fore anyway. The girls of Lincoln is getting tired of being call a lyier by married wemen all the time, and is also getting tired of being acussed of going with the married men. There is enought unmarried men for us.

Please print this tomorrow. special to the jurnal.

A. That is hard luck, I'm sure. I reckon married women do forget their dignity sometimes and wrongfully accuse girls of trying to "vamp" their husbands. But you musn't be too hard on the poor things. Put yourself in the place of one of them. If you had a husband inclined to step out a bit, wouldn't you be jealous of a young, attractive girl whom the husband admired?

Just conduct yourself as a self-respecting young woman should and I'm sure that in a short time, when these women see the error of their ways, they will stop making life miserable for you

Dear Mary Gordon: Reading in your column a letter signed "Lonesome No. 2," I wish to say this—that he isn't the only one. I am a young man of good habits but being a stranger here find it very hard to get acquainted. I am considered a "good mixer," have a good profession and would like to find some one who is not of the "flapper variety." If the young lady will do as she has suggested and is willing to take a chance, so will I.—"Lonesome No. 3."

A. Now what do you think I did? The young lady sent me her name and address and I lost it!

My best advice to all you lonely young people is, to take the regular channels of acquaintanceship, instead of trusting to the chance that would be incurred, were I to start introducing strangers.

I wonder if I may speak quite plainly to you and the other "Lonesomes?" I don't want to hurt your feelings, but since you have turned to me for help I feel that I must pass out a bitter pellet now and then, along with the sweet.

It's this: Don't you think you expect too much? You men expect pretty girls, with attractive clothes and vivacious manners. You girls expect good-looking men, well-dressed, with money to spend more or less freely, and an easy, metropolitan, if not cosmopolitan, air.

Most of you pass up the man or girl who is plain, shy, awkward, unused to company. You forget that they are often the people who have the most possibilities, who are only too eager to unfold their souls, to give you comradeship such as the more easily accessible never dreamed.

Oh, I admit I admire good-looking men, too, and I know that Harry Gordon is the handsomest man in Nebraska...And it's much easier to spend an evening with a good talker than with one who needs a lot of drawing out. ....But I have found that it's not always the most accessible things which are the most worth while. Think it over, "Lonesomes," and then come back at me, if you wish!

Marilynn: The word Mizpah, so often engraved inside wedding rings is from the Hebrew and means, "The Lord watch between me and thee while we are absent from one another."

KLAN FIGHT BRINGS ARMS

El Paso Polls Guarded by Special Police in Election to Determine Political Strength.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 24.—Special police guarded El Paso polls in an election today which will determine the political strength of the ku klux klan in the border country.

El Paso reverted to the days of the old west, with men from the plains, business leaders and others carrying bulky revolvers as they went to the voting places. Police officers admitted there were more armed men in El Paso today than in a decade. Business houses were closed and work suspended as crowds of men made round after round of polling places to watch the progress of the voting.

The situation is the result of a bitter mayoralty fight. R. M. Dudley, president pro tem of the Texas senate, is leading an anti-klan force as candidate for mayor. He is opposed by a slate admitiedly favorable to the ku klux klan headed by P. E. Gardner.

PROBE SHIFTS TOWARD ITALY

MARCINO THOUGHT TO HAVE GOT $100,000 THERE.

Bank Wrecker Said to Have Returned From Old Country in 1921 With Sum to Begin Operations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—A warrant, charging embezzlement of the funds of a national bank, was issued today for Abraham Goldman, father-in-law of Joseph M. Marcino, alleged wrecker of the First National bank of Warren, Mass.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Investigation of the affairs of Joseph M. Marcino, barber-banker who is alleged to have wrecked financial institutions in many parts of the country, shifted to Italy today.

Authorities attempted to discover where the twenty-six year old Italian obtained his capital of $100,000 to launch his first banking venture.

Israel S. Berkman, Chicago attorney, informed Burns agents in charge of the investigation that Marcino returned from Italy in 1921 with "at least $100,000."

Berkman and his associates acted for the young Bonzi in his negotiations for the Niagara Insurance company of Buffalo.

The attorney said he investigated banks in Appleton, Wis., and Dixon, Ill., with a view to their purchase. Marcino planned to get control of Chicago institutions but the deals fell thru, Berkman said.

Authorities checking Marcino's accounts today declared he had at least $200,000 in his possession.

Frank L. Taylor, $50 a week president of the Warren, Mass., bank, one of the institutions which Marcino is alleged to have wrecked, was held in $10,000 bonds today pending his removal to Warren to face charges of embezzlement. Taylor declared he was Marcino's tool and personally did not benefit by the failure of the institution.

The Times Demand Better Farming

The prices of farm products will be higher; then later they will be lower. They will continue to fluctuate in the years to come pretty much as they have fluctuated in the years that have passed, with probably a gradually higher average.

The man who would make money farming, however, must not concern himself exclusively with the price—over which he has little or no control. He must do what the manufacturer is forced to do, when competition reduces prices—he must lower his costs. That always gives the individual farmer an advantage—and a very big advantage when he cuts his costs below the average.

It is not always an easy thing to do but it can be done.

A well-edited publication like The Nebraska Farmer, with the real interests of the farmer ever at heart, can be of great value to farm owners in pointing out the way to reduce costs. That is why it pays every man or woman in Nebraska who is interested in agriculture to read it regularly.

THINK DE VALERA DIRECTING ATTACKS

Experienced Strategist Is in Charge of the Irish Republican Movements Against Free State.

DUBLIN, Feb. 24.—While free state troops and Irish republicans fight in the streets of Dublin, and government squads raid republican gathering places looking for Eamonn de Valera, the latter is believed to be actively directing the sudden resumption of attacks on the state forces.

The irregular attacks during the night showed that they were directed by an experienced strategist, despite the fact that many of the men known as the "brains" of the republican army have been captured in the last few days. Assaults were directed against central telephone exchanges, capture of which would have disrupted communications thruout the capital and seriously hampered the free state authorities in their efforts to suppress the uprising.

Republicans launched a general attack on military posts in all parts of the city last night. Intensive firing continued for half an hour. Several civilians who ran to watch the battle were hit by stray bullets and wounded. One soldier was seen lying dead after the firing susided. The republicans carried their casualties away with them as they fell back.

FRENCH BEGIN NEW ACTIVITY

SEVERAL HUNDRED TAKEN IN CUSTODY AT BOCHUM.

Town Councillors Said to Have Been Driven From City Hall Into Street With Bayonets and Rifle Butts.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—Wholesale arrests of Germans were made by the French in the Ruhr valley today, according to a dispatch from Bochum.

In that city several hundred citizens were taken into custody and the majority were detained. Posters were put up in conspicuous places announcing the "intensified" state of siege.

Advices from German sources said that when the French troops went to the city hall to arrest the town councillers, a number of these dignitaries were driven into the streets with bayonets and rifle butts. Nineteen of the councillors were arrested, including the burgomaster, because they declined to supply food to the French.

A Full Day.

It didn't take Jessie and Peter long to make up their minds to wed when Uncle Bill gave them permission "to marry the next day if they wanted to." Inside that wonderful ranch bungalow, before a big open fireplace, the happy pair planned for the great event which might take place the following day if Jessie's parents wired consent.

Everybody in the household seemed to be anxiously awaiting the expected wire that next morning. Wing Flu, the Chinese servant, and Wolf-Wolf, the great Dane, ran to the door every time the bell rang. Peter and Jessie ate thir grapefruit with trembling lips and wistful eyes turned toward the path which was to bring their fate message.

At last the boy, clad in khaki, whom they had longed to see, sauntered up the rambling path. Twice he stopped to tie his shoe laces and once he paused to throw a stone at a coyote. Uncle Bill could wait no longer. He rushed from the table, opened the door and shouted: "Hey, there, winged messenger, more power to your legs! Don't you know that life and death, love and life eternal depend upon your limbs, more power, I say ,hustle up!"

One thrust of Uncle Bill's gigantic thumb thru the little yellow envelope and he read: "Blessings to Jessie and Peter. Mother and Dad."

"So that's that," laughed the big westerner, turning a happy face to the young couple. "Today I am going to give you the biggest wedding the town's had in an age. Get the parson, Peter; I'll get the caterer, the brass band and all the young folks in town. Meanwhile get me my checkbook, Peterkins."

Uncle Bill wrote out a check for ten thousand dollars and, smiling, handed it to Jessie with a low bow.

"To the best little girl in the world," he said. "This will start you off with a New York flat when you return this summer. And remember that when your old uncle passes on; the ranch and all his worldly goods go to you and Peter, and—"

At this stage Jessie put her hand playfully over Uncle Bill's mouth as she and Peter heartily thanked him for his good interest as well as his generous check.

Then the wires began to buzz, and the minister, French ice cream and a jazz band were summoned in one breath. At last arrangements were made for 4 o'clock that very afternoon, and as the chimes on the mahogany grandfather's clock piped out the quarter hour Peter and Jessie met between the great palms and potted ferns. A few of the guests were in the next room and Uncle Bill was bustling about finishing up the last details.

Jessie wore a blue chiffon velvet gown which she had brought for evening wear. Peter wore a heavy tweed suit. They were appropriately clad for the informal afternoon wedding on a great ranch.

"Did you think it would end this way?" asked Peter, smiling down at Jessie as he held her in his strong young arms.

"I always knew we would wed, but I hadn't expected such a wonderful wedding in this great golden west," she replied.

"Some day we'll go back to New York and have our home just around the corner from Broadway," he laughed, "but meanwhile we'll enjoy our honeymoon in the great west."

"The land of the free and the brave, Peterkins."

"The land of sun and health," he answered, as he bent closer to her and whispered, "but any old land would be great with you as a helpmate."

The End.

ARGUES OVER INHERITANCE

LOWER HOUSE DISCUSSES MATTER OF DIRECT HEIRS.

Jacoby Bill Doubling Inheritance Tax Debated in Committee of the Whole Up to Noon Hour When Progress Reported.

Members of the house apparently are not agreed as to the desirability of a provision in the proposed inheritance tax law providing for doubling of the tax where the inheritance falls to direct heirs. H. R. 135, Jacoby bill, doubles the inheritance tax schedule except as to direct heirs. The committee on revenue which reported the bill out to general file, did not see fit to include direct heirs. Representative Wilson of Lancaster proposed the amendment and argued for it.

He explained that the present 1 per cent tax means little or nothing. For example, he took a $30,000 inheritance falling to a widow and one child. The widow, in the absence of a will, would receive $15,000, entirely exempt from inheritance tax under the holdings of the supreme court. Of the $15,000 which the child would inherit, $10,000 is exempt. This would leave but $5,000 of a $30,000 estate on which to levy and a 1 per cent tax would bring in but $50.

Representatives Davis of Cass and Bock argued against any change in the law as pertaining to direct heirs. The main arguing point of the opposition being that the direct heirs often play a prominent part in the acparent.

After strenuous debate, the house killed in committee, H. R. 371, making deficiencies in school districts unlawful.

The house advanced to third reading H. R. 199, Mears bill providing that railroad companies shall provide adequate water supply for livestock in shipping yards when directed to do so by the state railway commission.

Representative Burke opposed H. R. 463, Bock bill increasing from $600 to $700, maximum amount railroads shall pay for crossings where their tracks cross a farm. Any amount in excess to be borne by the company and the landowner on a fifty-fifty basis. It was explained that the railroads were satisfied and that the farmers are satisfied and the bill was advanced.

URGES EXAMINATION OF VETS IN PRISON

Governor of Wisconsin Declares Investigation in That State Shows 62 Per Cent Incarcerated Are Abnormal.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 24.—In letters to governor of all states, John J. Blaine, Wisconsin's chief executive, today urged a mental and physical examination of all war veterans in prisons.

Under Blaine's orders, a survey of the 225 veterans in Wisconsin's state prison and reformatory disclosed the following, his letter said:

Sixty-two per cent of veterans in the state prison were mentally abnormal, and 40 per cent at the reformatory.

Forty per cent has physical diseases that need medical attention.

Over 20 per cent of the crimes were directly traceable to military service.

More than 60 per cent were committed for "trivial offenses" against money and property, arising from disregard for property developed to some extent from war experiences.

"I am now proceeding to handle the cases by transfer to proper institutions for physical and mental treatment where necesasry, and executive action will be taken where the offense is traceable to military service, where the cases involved are trivial or minor offenses, and where the cases justify commutation of sentence," Governor Blaine said.

"Those affected with mental and physical disabilities, particularly, or men incarcerated for trivial offenses and serving long terms, or men incarcerated because of offenses arising out of service for their country—the government of the United States owes to these men some sane intelligent consideration," the latter said.

Surrender of Labor Leader Saves Bondsmen $180,000 Which Would Have Been Forfeited by Night.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—"Big Tim" Murphy, Chicago labor czar, today gave up the fight to avoid serving a four-year sentence for robbing the mails. He surrendered to United States Marshal Levy shortly before noon after evading efforts of a corps of marshals to take him into custody for the last three days.

Murphy lost his characteristic bravado as he walked into the marshal's office accompanied by attorneys.

"There are three million people in Chicago—why do they pick on me?" "Big Tim" asked surily.

He wore a familiar broad checked suit with a heavy fur overcoat thrown over his arm.

He had been hiding in old haunts "back of the yards" while officers scoured the city for him.

A last effort of attorneys to obtain an extension of the thirty day stay of execution granted Murphy pending an appeal to the supreme court, failed just before the labor leader surrendered. Judge Wilkerson overruled their request that "Big Tim" be allowed to remain at liberty until a decision is handed down. The court's ruling is expected Monday and the labor leader will not be taken to Leavenworth prison before that time.

"They're all nuts! They're all nuts!" Murphy declared when informed that the court refused to extend his period of freedom.

Surrender of Murphy saved bondsmen $180,000 which they had pledged for his freedom. Federal officials were prepared to order the bonds forefeited if "Big Tim" failed to surrender today.

He was convicted with four others of conspiracy to rob the mails in the huge Dearborn station stickup two years ago.

HOUSE WON'T SEND A MAN

ST. PAUL CONFERENCE TO BE WITHOUT REPRESENTATIVE.

Members Insist State Well Enough Represented, and Declines to Incur Expense of Sending Delegate.

After some debate, the house Saturday morning voted down a motion to send Representative Oswin Kiefer of Nuckolls county as a delegate of that body to the conference to meet in St. Paul Tuesday and Wednesday of next week to discuss price stabilization. The state was to pay his expense. The recommandation was made by the agricultural committee.

Yochum of Otoe, objected to the consideration of the resolution, but when informed that this would mean its defeat since Monday would be too late to act, he withdrew his protest. He said that he questioned the advisability of sending a delegate in view of the fact that the morning paper carried an announcement of the appointment of thirty-three Nebraskans. These represent every interest in the state now, and it is unnecessary to send another man.

Auten thought that as J. O. Shroyer was named by the farmers' union to represent it, he could represent the state as well. Several members protested that Shroyer is a registered lobbyist and that the house should not send a lobbyist to represent it, but a member.

Others thought that the house ought to show it is alive and interested, but when the vote was taken the motion was lost, 34 to 46.

H. R. 171, cutting motor vehicle license taxes in two, recommended for slaughter by the standing committee, drew a new lease of life. O'Malley, the author, is in the hospital, and it was kept alive until Tuesday, when he returns. Otherwise it would have died automatically Saturday.

Standing committees reported for indefinite postponement, H. R. 356, which requires inspection and certification for tuberculosis of all animals shipped into the staet, within sixty days of ther arrival, and H. R. 438, which appropriates $500 for a monument in Massacre canyon.

The committees reported these for the general file, with amendments:

H. R. 35, relating to rural paving in Lancaster county.

H. R. 201, reducing salaries of county judges.

H. R. 515, requiring electric transmission lines to serve customers along their right of way.

H. R. 313, appropriating money for the relief of the widows of two North Platte officers, killed in the line of duty.

H. R. 411, appropriating money for the relief of the family of Robert L. Taylor, guard at the state penitentiary, killed by James B. King, revengeful negro convict.

The committee on medical societies decided to let the house fight it out over the qualifications required of chiropractors. It reported H. R. 280, covering this subject, to the general file without recommendation.

PREPARE TO ASK M'KOIN INDICTED

State of Louisiana to Lay Cards Face Up on Table When New Morehouse Parish Grand Jury Meets.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 24.—When the new Morehouse parish grand jury meets March 5, the state of Louisiana will be prepared to lay its cards, face up, on the table and ask the indictment of Dr. B. M. McKoin, T. J. Burnett and others on a charge of murder in connection with the kidnapping and murder of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards, it was learned here today.

A score or more persons whose names were prominently mentioned in the open hearing at Bastrop will be charged before the grand jury with usurping the power of lawful government, as a result of their alleged activities in deporting "undesirables," and otherwise taking the law into their own hands.

The attorney general, in a statement, announced that he was well pleased with the personnel of the new grand jury and that reports of certain members of the body being members of the ku klux klan did not lessen his belief in their ability and willingness to render an unbiased and just decision.

"The grand jury will be instructed to return indictments, even on a 'presumption of guilt,' and I believe the evidence against those whom we will request indictments to be so overwhelming, that the jury will not ignore it, however strong their klan affiliations are."

TO REVERSE RAIL POLICY

Senator Brookhart of Iowa Introduces Bill Which Would Repeal Esch-Cummings Act.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Complete reversal of all existing governmental policies regarding railroads is provided in a bill introduced today by Senator Brookhart of Iowa and referred to the senate interstate commerce committee. Brookhart said President Harding should call an extra session to consider it.

The bill would repeal practically all the vital sections of the Esch-Cumming transportation act, and would amend the former law on valuation so that the basis for railroad valuation in future would become the fact market value of the roads' securities. This, Brookhart said, "would take $7,000,000,000 in water out of railroad valuation."

NEWS FROM NEBRASKA

STINER ASKS BAIL FOR DR. C. L. EGBERT

Wishes Clinet Removed From Jail to a Hospital for Treatment Carried on Cot to the Courtroom.

HASTINGS, Feb. 24.—L. B. Stiner, counsel for Dr. C. L. Egbert, charged with first degree murder in connection with the shooting of his son-in-law, Charles R. Gordon, will file an application in district court today to have bail fixed for the removal of Dr. Egbert to a hospital for treatment.

Yesterday at his arraignment, Dr. Egbert was carried on a cot from his cell to the county court at 5 p. m. He did not speak during the entire proceedings, but lay with half closed eyes, occasionally groaning.

After the complaint charging murder in the first degree was read by County Attorney Walter Crow, Stiner in reply to Judge Turbyfill's query if the surgeon was prepared to plead, said, "We wish to enter no plea, but stand mute."

The court then entered a plea of "not guilty," as is done when the defendant does not plead.

"We waive preliminary examination," was then announced by the surgeon's counsel.

Judge Turbyfill overruled Stiner's request in county court to have Dr. Egbert released on bail and today Egbert's counsel will renew the application in district court. Meanwhile Dr. Egbert is being held in the county jail.

When Dr. Egbert was carried into court a stocking cap was pulled well down over his face, and an army blanket came up to the cap. The only indication that Dr. Egbert was paying any attention to the proceedings came while the complaint was being read. Just after the county attorney began to read, the surgeon pulled the cap up sufficiently to expose the left ear, as if for the purpose of hearing. At no time did his eyes seek the court or the prosecutor.

Mr. Stiner said, outside the court, that his client could not have walked up the stairs.

WELTER APPEALS HIS CASE

Cash Bond of $3,500 Given and Supreme Court Suspends Execution of Sentence.

P. Eversole at Elk Creek, in December, has appealed his case to the district court. An appeal bond of $3,500 has been given in cash, and the supreme court has suspended the execution of sentence pending trial in that tribunal. Welter, who is just twenty-one years of age and who was confined in the Johnson county jail, has been released. It is expected Banker will be tried on one offense at the March term of the court, which convenes in Tecumseh on March 5.

WHO SHOT MARTY MAHER?

That Is a Question Agitating Authorities at Omaha After the Railway Yard Tragedy.

OMAHA, Feb. 24.—Who shot Marty Maher?

"His own pals," declares Henry Beal, county attorney.

A coroner's jury yesterday probed the shooting of the young gangster in a battle in the Great Western railroad yards Wednesday morning, but failed to fix responsibility.

"Samuel C. Curtis, the railroad watchman who engaged the gang of alleged boxcar thieves in battle, specifically stated he did not fire at anyone on top of a boxcar," Beal said. "One of the car tops was gory; a man who was shot like Maher was wounded could not have climbed up; there is no proof that any other man was shot; and in my opinion Maher's own companions became confused in the battle and fired at him as he climbed to the top of the car in a run for safety or a strategic firing point."

BETTY'S PEEK INTO TURKEY.

"Oh, pshaw!" Betty growled when her mama called her in from her play to tidy up. "I get so tired of washing my hands all the time. It makes me tired, I tell you!" And she kicked the ground with her toes.

"Well, well!" laughed a merry voice, and Gocomeback, the little travel elfin, hopped down beside her from the tree above her head. "Tut, tut! How foolish! Now, I have a little friend——"

"Who never washes and you'll take me there if I want to go," laughed Betty merrily, catching hold of the little elfin's hand and making him dance. "I'm dying to go, Gocomeback. Where does she live? But, mind you, I complained, but really and truly I wouldn't like to live in a land where folks never wash. Honestly, I wouldn't care to live there."

"I should say you wouldn't," replied the elfin. "No, sir, this little friend of mine—but there, that would be telling. You'll agree with me that seeing is believing. I move that we pay her a visit. Of course, if you would care to stay, maybe I could make some arrangements." Before Betty knew where they were going, she found herself flying through the air.

When they came down to earth again, Betty's eyes fairly danced.

"Oh, for goodness sake!" she cried. "We're in Turkey! I can tell by the way the people dress. Isn't that funny? Our lesson for tomorrow is on the people of Turkey and their customs. My, I'm glad I'm here."

"So am I," laughed another voice, and a little girl came skipping up to great Gocomeback.

"Betty, this is my little friend Galata."

"I'm glad to know you, Betty," smiled the little black-eyed girlie. "We're always glad to meet our American friends. How do you like our country?"

"Well," and Betty looked rather em-

"This Is My Friend Galata."

barrassed, "I can't say that I admire your muddy, dark streets. But I love your wonderful fountains. Why, it seems to me that everywhere you look, you see beautiful, sparkling fountains. We have a few at home, but none so beautiful as the ones you have here—nor as many."

"Not so many? How can you get along without them?" asked the astonished little Galata. "What do you do when you want to pray? Don't you find it hard?"

Betty looked so surprised that all three began to laugh. Gocomeback had to come to the rescue.

"No, Galata," he explained. "Betty doesn't pray as much as you children in Turkey do. You see, Betty, every good little Turk must first wash his hands, face and feet before he can enter the mosques to pray. That's the reason you see so many fountains. They need a large number to accommodate the great crowds."

"My goodness, yes!" laughed Galata. "We have at least five services a day. So we must have five washings every day."

This was too much for Betty, and she burst out laughing, and like a vision the whole thing vanished and she stood once more in her own back yard.

Into the house she scampered. Mother heard her humming as she washed herself. But she never stopped to ask any questions.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Report Father Graham Gave Madge About Home Folks.

MY journey home was uneventful, and my nerves gradually settled into tranquillity after my fright concerning the taxi-driver who had taken me to the station from the Bliss apartment.

By the time I reached the lamp-lit station at Bridgehampton, I almost had persuaded myself that I'd been mistaken all through, and that no message concerning me had been passed between the driver and the porter who had carried my bag to the train. It was nothing, I decided, with which to trouble Lillian.

I knew how strictly she kept all her worries to herself, and I had the secret feeling that I'd cut rather a ludicrous figure with my production of a revolver—though no one had seen it save me—for which I had not found the slightest use. I did not care at all to relate that part of the story to Lillian.

My father met me at the station, and when his arms went round me in welcome, I felt a sudden leaping of my spirits. This was home and peace and safety. I felt a million miles away from the intrigues and dangers I had sensed in the city.

"Junior?" I queried anxiously as my father released me, and with his hand under my elbow escorted me to the waiting car.

Madge Is Confused.

"As wonderful as ever," he returned with grandfatherly fatuousness. "Perfectly well, and happy, except that every day he repeatedly demanded to know when you were coming home."

"Bless his baby heart!" I apostrophized ardently.

"Amen," my father said as fervently, and I waited until I was perched on the seat beside him, and he had started the car homeward before I asked the other questions which were trembling on my lips.

"Is Lillian all right, and has Mother Graham been—difficult, and—and—how is young Mr. Chester getting along?"

I was furious at myself for stammering over the last question; and was glad indeed that in the darkness my father could not see the flush which I felt burning my cheeks. I told myself angrily that it was no wonder I stammered and flushed when I remembered the ugly opposition Mother Graham had given to the wounded boy's presence in the house, and when I anticipated Dicky's sure and equally unpleasant reaction to the news. But I eagerly hoped that my father had not noticed my confusion.

"Has Katie Been Behaving?"

If his keen perceptions had caught the stammer, he gave no indication of it. His answering voice was as calmly perfunctory as if he had been discussing the price of the late cabbages.

"Mrs. Underwood is her usual self," he said. "I think her physical condition is steadily improving, and you know she is always the same mentally. She never lets down in spirit."

"I know," I assented softly.

"Your mother-in-law," he went on, with the formal note which his voice always holds in speaking of that doughty lady, "has made no difficulty at all concerning young Chester's presence here. I fancy she keeps all of that for your benefit when she feels especially disagreeable. But, aside from that, I fancy you will have no especial trouble with her now. She is exceedingly grateful to you, I think, for your action in going to your husband, and stopping the publicity concerning him. As for young Chester, he is slowly getting better, is able to sit up a few hours each day, but he is very weak, and it would be a risk to move him for another week, although in case——"

He stopped, and I knew he was thinking of Dicky's possible attitude when he came home.

"There is no 'in case'!" I returned hotly. "That boy has done too much for us, risked too much, not to be entitled to all the care we can give him. He shall stay right where he is until it is perfectly safe to move him—longer if he wishes."

"It will be, of course, as you wish," my father said quietly, and I felt unaccountably rebuked, not for my decision, but for the warmth of it. I wished that I could see the expression on his face, but, failing that, hastened to fill up the silence with another question:

"Has Katie been behaving?" I tried to make my voice light and care-free, but was conscious of failing miserably.

There was a perceptible pause before his answer.

"Yes, as far as behaving goes, she has been all right," he said at last, "but the girl either is not well or is worrying unduly over something. And, like Junior, she has asked every day when you were coming home."

LENTEN FLOWERS :: By Juanita Hamel

WHAT is there about lovely flowers that makes them all seem holy and causes us to use their names sometimes when we would express the beauty, the fine simplicity and the goodness of a sweet young girl? If you cannot answer quickly, ask the first true lover you meet—who, perhaps for the first time in this swiftly-passing Lenten season, has really learned to understand this and to look upon her whom he loves with wide-open, tender eyes of adoration and true reverence.

YOUR HEALTH

How Science Cures Cases of Exophthalmic Goitre

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City
U. S. Senator-Elect from New York State

MANY a young life has been ruined because of untimely submission to disease. It is bad enough to suffer from heart trouble or chronic bronchitis in old age, but the victim has the joyous memory, perhaps, of a long life relatively free from sickness and pain.

I have witnessed the affliction of a number of young women, at that time of life when health and vigor are essential, not only to their own happiness, but to the welfare of their little ones. The time will come in this country, as it has in other lands, when the young mother and the prospective mother will get greater care than they receive today. To provide the nation with vigorous children there must be healthy and vigorous motherhood.

To accomplish this vital thing it should be unnecessary for the state to interfere. When public health education has become as far-reaching and as permeating as the education given by the schools, there will be knowledge of health matters in every home. Indeed, if I had my way, education in health would be made an important and required part of every school curriculum.

Some of the Causes.

Among the ailments which attack young women is a group of symptoms called "exophthalmic goitre." It is met between the ages of 18 and 30. Of course it may appear at any time of life and may attack men as well as women. In men the condition is apt to be found later—between the ages of 30 and 45.

Most of the victims of exophthalmic goitre are highly strung and nervous persons. They may come from families easily over-wrought.

Sometimes a great shock, overwhelming grief, terrible fright or prolonged illness or overwork, may be at fault for the physical effect. As a result, the nervous system is thrown out of gear, and health and prospects are shattered.

The prominence of the front of the neck is due to the size of a large gland, called the thyroid gland. In exophthalmic goitre this gland is more or less enlarged. Perhaps the first symptom of trouble may be the gradually thickening neck.

In simple goitre—the ordinary variety—the trouble is limited to the thyroid. All the symptoms are due to the enlargement, with its resulting pressure on adjacent parts.

"Natural Methods" Help.

In exophthalmic goitre, among other signs, is a remarkable prominence of the eyes. The eyes are pushed forward, the lids are widely separated and the patient has what is popularly known as "pop eyes." The doctors give this condition a Greek name, exophthalmic, meaning protrusion of the eyes.

Other characteristic signs of this disease are great rapidity of the heart, muscular tremblings, localized sweatings, and, perhaps, falling of the hair. Loss of weight, digestive disturbance, sleeplessness, mental depression and general misery—these are accompanying symptoms.

Let me hold out every encouragement regarding the outcome of these distressing cases. They are cured. I have seen aggravated forms which have disappeared under hygienic and medical treatment.

Your doctor will direct the treatment, but in addition to his remedies, he will make great use of what we may call the "natural methods"—both mental and physical rest, proper diet, fresh air, stantial benefit may be looked for.

Answers to Health Questions

J. J. J. Q—Will you please tell me what causes dark circles under the eyes and whether they can be cured?

A—Dark circles under the eyes are caused by constipation, indigestion, kidney complaint or eyestrain. This condition can be cured if the cause is found and corrected. For this purpose have a thorough physical examination made, including a urinalysis and blood-count.

L. T. Q—A relative of mine is suffering from sleeping sickness. She lapses into unconsciousness and is in this coma for from two hours to an entire week. Can this be cured?

A—Yes, this disease can be cured by proper treatment.

W. G. H. Q—Whenever I flex or bend my right arm I experience a tearing sensation in my elbow and my arm seems to be weak. Would it be advisable to have an X-ray taken?

A—Yes, it would be advisable for you to have an X-ray taken and see whether it shows the cause of the trouble. Then the proper treatment can be prescribed by your physician.

MRS. K. F. Q—Will you kindly tell me whether shingles are due to a nervous condition?

A—Yes, this is a disease of nervous origin.

P. B. Q—I am troubled with a pain in the region of my right kidney and also frequent urination. Will you please tell me what this may be due to and what treatment is best?

A—Have an X-ray taken to see if the distress is due to a stone in the kidney. If not you are probably suffering from lumbago. For this trouble you should have your back strapped with adhesive plaster.

MRS. M. T. Q—Will you kindly tell me the cause of swollen legs and ankles?

A—If this condition is not due to overweight, you are probably suffering from kidney trouble. Have your urine analyzed and submit the report to your doctor, who will then advise you.

A. C. Q—Will you please tell me what to do for marks left in the face by acne?

A—These marks may disappear in time. However, if they are not very deep, hot and cold compresses, each for ten minutes, applied daily, or X-ray treatments may prove helpful.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

Here's How to Plan Your Work to Avoid Being "Worn Out"

By WANDA BARTON

TO BE busy is right and natural for the housewife. If she is attending to her work in the proper way all is well. For work done under wholesome, normal conditions never hurts anyone. It is when work is done aimlessly, inefficiently and in the hard way that we come to the breaking-point, the starting-point of nerves.

There is no one plan for housework that will work out in all families. So many factors enter into the planning of each home that housework is bound to differ with varying needs. The woman who does all of her own work is the one who needs the greatest amount of advice as to methods of step and time saving. The woman who has part-time assistance usually gets a little rest, even though her work may not be so well arranged that she gets the most aid out of her helper.

Every step, every motion must count when the woman does all of her work. Every needed utensil that lifts a burden should be hers. Not only mechanical helpers should be employed wherever possible, but the entire household should become co-operative, so that the entire burden may not fall upon one.

The woman herself, however, is in many ways the only one who can save herself. If you must do the washing, change the whole family's outfit so that it may be made easier and quicker. For children, adopt rompers instead of petticoats, cotton-crepe dresses and nighties that wash easily and need no ironing.

Use paper napkins for luncheon, doilies and table-squares instead of tablecloths. In every possible way save the bulk of the work. Many women think it far better to send out shirts, collars and sheets to the public laundry.

Linoleum on floors is easier to care for than hardwood floors that must be oiled and polished. Small rugs are more easily managed than large ones. Silver not in use should be cleaned and put away.

The kitchen should be cheery, bright and convenient, for here it is that the housewife spends many hours. Unhappy surroundings are depressing. On her bookshelves devoted to food and cookery books there should be two or three standard volumes that she may pick up to while away a few minutes now and then, while waiting for something to cook that cannot be left alone.

If a woman will make a law for herself that she will rest one hour every afternoon, she will be surprised at the amount of good it will do her. This custom will soon become known to and respected by the family, so she will not be disturbed. But she must make the law herself, and stick to it, no matter what may come up. If she allows herself to be disturbed she will be.

The woman who takes time to go to market not only saves money by seeing and choosing what she buys, but she gets a little walk, air and sunshine, which are good for her health and spirits. It is easier to stay in and work after a peep outdoors.

Being busy does not mean overdoing. If there is a heavy piece of furniture to move let it wait until there is someone to help. Don't move it and strain your back to show how clever you are. No one will appreciate the effort, and you may suffer.

Don't wash windows on a bitter day just because it happens to be your day for the work. Wait until it is warmer, and do something else instead.

If you have to look after the furnace during the day, see that coal is placed in a bucket for the purpose, or that the bin is so arranged that coal can be gotten with the least amount of effort.

A busy woman must plan to save herself, and she need not wear herself out if she makes her brain save her steps.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT A Boy and "Home"

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

POOR, lonesome, hungry, shivering, pitiful, little fellow!

Did you read about him in the papers the other day? Eight years old, and his step-mother ran away and left him alone.

"Your father's dead," she said, "and I'm going back to the old country. Here's five dollars. Make it go as far as you can."

That was two weeks before a woman who lives in the top flat heard something up on the roof—something that sounded like somebody walking and talking—and she went up there and found the little lonesome boy sitting in a big packing-case of some sort that somebody had left on the roof—he and his dog.

He was just getting ready for bed, and he was telling the dog about it. It didn't take him long to get ready—all he had to do was to put his school books down for a pillow and lift the dog into the box and shut his eyes—and there he was.

Cold and hungry and forsaken—but he had his dog!

"Gee, I Was Lucky!"

And he had something else—something that kept his heart warm.

You may think he was friendless, just because he was alone and cold and hungry.

You're wrong.

He had two friends—two boys of his own age. He picked them up in the street, and they showed him the packing-case on the roof, and one of them gave him a ladder, so he could climb up into it, and the other managed to bring him a little bread and a ragged piece of meat for his dinner.

And when he shivered so that he could not sleep he just snuggled the little dog closer to him and looked up at the stars, and remembered—his two faithful friends.

"Gee, I was lucky to have them!" he said to the woman who found him in the box. "They gave me my dog, too. I don't hardly know how I'd a-got along without him. He helped keep me warm at night, and sometimes when I'd shiver, he'd lick my face. And he stayed in the box just as good, and when I'd come home from school there he'd be waiting for me just as glad!

More Precious Than Riches

"He didn't care whether I had any home or any mother or nothing. He just liked me, and stayed with me. I hope nobody will make anybody take him away from me. Somebody might be mean to him, and I'd hate to think about that at night when I couldn't sleep."

I wonder if he'll grow up and be rich and successful, and forget all about the box where he slept, and the cold stars that sparkled so bright above him—maybe he will.

But I hope he will never forget the two little friends who stood by him so faithfully in his loneliness and misery, for I know he'll never forget that dog.

I wish I knew who those two boys were. They were poor, too, and lived in no great comfort in a poor street—I'd keep track of them if I were a man of affairs.

Those two loyal hearts of theirs will be worth good money some day to some one who tries to buy loyalty and fidelity, and who finds in bitterness of spirit that these things are not for sale.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Fur-Trimmed, Green Evening Gown of Straight, Simple Lines.

MISS LOCKETT wrote me from Paris," said Haidee, bounding in, waving a letter.

"I know her letter is a good one," I remarked. "That is, if she has the happy faculty of writing anything like she talks."

"She has," Haidee said. "And she has been a brick about telling me all about clothes."

"What's the marginal illustration?" I asked, catching a glimpse and a pen-and-ink sketch on the margin of the foreign note paper with its delicate, silky texture.

"Oh, a slipper she drew," Haidee informed me. "She's having it made in green and gold velvet to wear with a new frock."

"Evidently, slippers are quite as fancy there as they are here," I remarked.

"Quite," she said. "Miss Lockett says the French also have a flair for leaving the instep unsupported."

"Do tell me about her dress," I urged.

"This queer, straight sketch at the end is meant to look like it," Haidee said, holding the last page of the letter so I could see a frock depicted there.

"What a charming, slinky thing!" I exclaimed.

"Wait until I read you the labels and you'll see how effective it must be," she said. "Miss Lockett has labelled arrows pointing to the different materials."

"The sheath-like frock is green velvet," Haidee informed me, "and she explains that one of the smart features lies in the fact that the green velvet overslip is split from waist to hem at either side."

"Revealing what kind of underslip?" I asked.

"Gold cloth," she answered, after consulting the label. "Gold cloth shows, too, in the deeper slit beneath either arm," she explained further.

"What is the fur at the hem?" I asked.

"Soft, long gray fox, the letter tells us," she informed me.

"That frock is rather typical of the French, I think," Haidee said. "It's so simple it's almost ridiculous, and still it's too stunning for words, if you can understand those two classifications going together."

"I can," I agreed with her. "And better still, I can just picture Miss Lockett's slim young figure in that stunning outfit."

This Velvet Evening Frock Is Slit to Reveal a Gold-Cloth Slip.

"She's wearing gold beads and a gold and green head-dress and gold and green velvet slippers," Haidee further informed me.

"When is she coming back?" I asked Haidee.

"Not until late spring," she told me. "She is there with her mother, you know, and she's enjoying life so much and learning so much French that she plans to stay to see spring come in Paris."

"And probably the races," I added.

"Think of the things she'll have to tell us about!" Haidee exclaimed.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
My age is 19, and I am going with a nice young man. He is a sailor. I must confess I love him, and I think he loves me, but I have numerous friends who dislike him just because he is a sailor. Nearly all my friends shun me because I continue to go with him.

Should I give him up and go with my other friends, or should I continue to go with him and let my friends go their own way?

BRIGHT EYES.

BRIGHT EYES: Why should you give up the friendship of this young man? His profession is a noble and brave one. Your friends are wrong in their judgment, my dear.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl in my teens, and am very much interested in a young man two years my senior.

He is very handsome, and I would like to gain his friendship. He is respected wherever he goes.

Please advise me how I may win his friendship.

BLUE-EYED BETTY.

BLUE-EYED BETTY: If you have been introduced to the young man, ask him to call on you. This is the only correct way to start a friendship.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a young married woman and have a baby a year and a half old, but my husband does not live with me or support me or my child.

Now, there is a man who likes me very much, and wants me to marry him. I like this man very much, but he is very jealous. Will you kindly give me your advice in this matter?

WORRIED.

WORRIED: Wait until you are free, my dear, before you accept attentions from any man.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a man 21 years old, and have been going with a pretty young girl of 18. We have been going together for almost a year. She adores me and promised me to be mine some day.

When we are alone she pays every attention to me that any girl could, but when in public she has once or twice left me and gone with one of her old chums.

What would you advise me to do? Shall I mention the matter to her, which may result in a quarrel? Or shall I try to forget her entirely?

DISCOURAGED.

DISCOURAGED: You are too exacting with the young lady, my friend. It is only natural for her to want to talk with old friends. Don't pay any attention to such small things and you will be much happier.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl in my early teens. I go with a young man four years older than I, whom I love dearly, and he also says he loves me. This young man wishes me to go with no one else but him. I have had many chances to go with men to the theatre or a dance, and I have always refused. Should I give them up for him? We are not engaged.

DOLLY STORM.

DOLLY STORM: You are doing a very foolish and unwise thing, my dear, in giving up other young men for a man to whom you are not engaged.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, FEB. 25-26.

Sunday's horoscope shows more than the usual activity for the Sabbath day, owing to the strong position of Mars, stimulating all the energies. Some substantial benefit may be looked for.

Those whose birthday it is have the augury of an active year of substantial progress, but they should make all contracts with caution. A child born on this day may be expected to be active and progressive and to attain a fine position in life.

Monday's astrological chart is important for those in the employment of others and for those wishing to win the favor of persons in high places. The prestage for them is hopeful and encouraging if they are undeniably deserving, and their ambitions may be attained.

Those whose birthday it is may push for advancement, seeking promotion or recognition or favors from those in authority if undeniably deserving. A child born on this day should be generally successful in its undertakings and may be expected to rise in life.

JONES ADMITS SUBSIDY LOST

CHIEF SUPPORTER DECLARES HE RECOGNIZES END.

Asks That Victorious Enemeis Refrain From Recommitting It to Commerce Committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The defeat of the ship subsidy bill at this session of congress was openly conceded by administration forces today.

Senator Jones of Washington, in charge of the measure made this announcement to the senate, stating he had given up the fight for the bill.

Even should the senate on Monday vote to proceed again to consider the bill, Jones gave notice he would supporta motion to lay it aside for consideration of other business.

"I am ready to end this matter right now," said Jones. "I know when I am beaten and I recognize that the end has come."

Jones promised the bill would not be considered any further at this session of congress. He asked, however, that its victorious enemies refrain from recommitting it to the commerce committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The senate today fixed 1 p. m Monday as the hour for the impending obsequies of the ship subsidy bill.

Under an agreement entered into soon after the senate convened today an adjournment will be taken at 5 p. m. today until 11 Monday morning. Two hours will be devoted to bills on the calendar and at 1 p. m. Senator Jones' action to restore the subsidy as the unfinished business will come up. Immediate disposition of the motion by a roll call on a motion to table Jones' proposal is expected.

Under the 'capitulation agreement" which the filibusterers yesterday exacted from the administration forces, the first two hours of the session, at least were to be devoted to consideration of bills on the calendar many of which have been held up by the ship subsidy filibuster.

Meanwhile preparations were being made for the formal burial of the subsidy, now definitely dead, and conceded by even its warmest supporters to have no chance of resurrection in this congress.

Two reasons combined to delay the entombing of the bill.

These were:

1—Absence of several democratic senators who will vote to put the subsidy aside when the formal action disposing of it is taken.

2—A desire by some republican senators, among whom is Senator Lodge, to keep the subsidy as a barrier against the truth in fabrics and the filled milk bills which the farm bloc wants to pass.

Either of these was strong enough to prevent a vote today on the Jones motion to restore the subsidy to its place as the senate's current business.

WALLACE TO ISSUE WORD

Opposition to the Armour-Morris Merger Is Expected to Be Made Public.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in the near future expects to issue a public statement announcing his opposition to the proposed Armour-Morris packer merger, it was learned authoratively here today.

In this statement, Wallace may state that if the packing interests continue their plans for the merger he will issue a complaint against them under the packer control law.

M'CARTHY MUST FACE TRIAL

"Dapper Dan" Charged With Murder of Steve Kelleher, Rival Labor Leader.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—"Dapper Dan" McCarthy must stand trial for slaying Steve Kelleher, rival labor leader.

Despite testimony by McCarthy and three other men before the coroner's inquest that the first shot in the fatal revolver duel in Al Tearney's cafe was fired by Kelleher, Assistant State Attorney Roy B. Woods ordered charges of murder filed. Woods will rely for conviction of McCarthy on the testimony of two women witnesses—Anna Howard and Jennie Plarr—both of whom said McCarthy was the aggressor and that he fired first.

IS COMPROMISE FARM BILL

Various Features of Capper, Lenroot-Anderson and Strong Bills Included.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—A compromise farm credits measure, including various features of the Capper, Lenroot-Anderson and Strong bills, was reported favorably by the house banking and currency committee today.

Efforts will be made to pass it next week.

The compromise plan has the approval of President Harding whose cabinet has been split on the question of farm credits. Secretaries Wallace and Hoover favor the Lenroot-Anderson bill passed by the senate, while Secretary Mellon opposes it.

PROTECTION FOR FROGS.

BISMARCK, N. D.—(By Mail.)—North Dakota objects to exploitation of her frog crop. The game and fish commission has a bill in the present legislature asking a closed season during April, May and June on transportation or sale of frogs.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

TEMPLE CAPACITY WAS TESTED AGAIN

Scottish Rite Banquet Called Out a Crowd That Filled the Building and Crowded the Dining Room.

The Scottish Rite Masons closed their February reunion Friday night with the usual banquet and toast list following. The orator of the class was Professor Joshi, who belongs to the Masonic blue lodge at Baroda, India, an exchange professor from the university of Bombay. The officers of the class which had taken the thirty-first and thirty-second degrees during the day are: President, Frank D. Eager; vice president, Peter Johnstone; secretary, Dr. Lee Cowan of Falls City; treasurer, William A. Bailey.

The large banquet room of the temple was filled almost to capacity, and one of the announcements made at the beginning ofthe program was the building committee now has its work under way and that before long excavation will begin on the east of the temple fora n addition that will greatly enlarge kitchen and dining room facilities. This announcement was made by W. B. Ryons, who made the preliminary announcements in introducing the toastmaster of the evening, C. Petrus Peterson.

Mr. Peterson with much pleasantry introduced Sear Davis as the first speaker. Mr. Davis after paying his respects laughingly to the toastmaster discussed the opportunities that Masons should make the most of. He said there are two kinds of people—one that have laurels on their brows and another that browse on their laurels. He urged his hearers to live up to the precepts and inspirations of the order.

Charles A. Caheppell, grand master of the Nebraska jurisdiction, spoke feelingly of the bereavement to Nebraska Masonry that had placed him in the place of Acting Grand Master. He referred to the death during the year of Grand Master Wellman. He spoke of the duties and work of Masons, of their opportunities and the charge that was intrusted to them.

Dr. Joshi said he was pleased that he had been privileged to form a connecting link between the Masonic lodges of the United States and India. He thought no nation can afford to say that it will live unto itself. God has placed the nations of the world into the melting pot of history. Of all Asiatics he though the Indians and the Persians more closely related to the culture and the civilization of the west. After all we are members of the same human family. Progress has given to the nations of the west new problems India has neglected the material in the forty or fifty centuries of its evolution and has emphasized the spiritual and cultural. After all mind must be sovereign in dealing with the material side of life.

At the conclusion of Professor Joshi's address Toastmaster Peterson proposed a toast to the Masonic lodges of India and it was joined enthusiastically by the banqueters.

A plea for constructive Masonry, a warning that there is not always strength in numbers, was heard from Grand Chaplain F. V. Loos of the Missouri jurisdiction. Mr. Loos lives at Liberty, Mo., and said he was a Campbellite preacher. Before he had ended his address he had made a plea for a literacy test of voters and had shown that Masonic lodges the country over were first in patriotism and constructive nationalism. He thought some confuse the doctrine of isolation with the doctrine of independence He wanted all to see the difference and to ponder the problems that those who would assume world responsibilities might bring to us. The making of citizens is today the slogan of Masonry, Mr. Loos kept his hearers in an uproar of laughter most of the time, but grew serious and drew applaus for the sentiments expressed.

"The best program ever heard at a reunion banquet" was a general expression as the Scottish Rite Masons filed out of the hall.

PROFITS TAX GETS A BUMP

BACK TO HOSTILE COMMITTEE ON REVENUE.

Jacoby Indulges in What Proves to Be Premature Celebration When House Declines to Kill.

The excess profits tax bill by Jacoby, riding on a high wave toward the last hurdle, received a cruel jolt in house committee of the whole Friday at a time when the going appeared smooth and the footing certain. It was sent back to a hostile committee for further consideration. By a vote of 40 to 49 the house declined to kill. Mr. Jacoby waved his arms, shouted across the table and otherwise conducted himself as one possessed of great joy. But the celebration was premature and a few moments later he sent this bulletin across the room:

"Goodbye bill."

Of the forty-nine who voted against killing the bill, fourteen are republicans. The remaining thirty-five are made up of democrats, including the two progressives, allies of the minority. Five democrats and thirty-five republicans voted to administer the chloroform. The bill has had a stormy time of it. The house committee on revenue, Representative Lamb, chairman, voted unanimously some days ago for indefinite postponement. One or two of the eleven committeemen, however, were absent The bill was filed on the floor of the house.

Altho considerable of a drive had been conducted to swing the farmers in line back of the bill, fourteen of them, either active or retired, voted to postpone. Representative Egger was the only other member of the Lancaster delegation to support Mr. Jacoby.

Representative Ward of Valley sounded the keynote against the proposition when he said:

"The federal excess profits tax was repealed because those who studied it came to the conclusion that it played into the hands of the profiteer. The corporation taxed simply raised the price of the commodity and the consumer must pay."

The bill as amended, proposes to tax corporations with an average invested capital of $100,000 or more. There is no proposed tax on the first ten per cent earned net income. A tax of ten per cent is proposed on amounts in excess of ten per cent of the invested capital and not in excess of forty per cent. It proposes further to tax twenty per cent of the amount of the annual net income in excess of forty per cent of the average invested capital. The introducer refers to it as a graduated state income tax on excess profits. He said that the principle of the thing was first proposed by W. J. Bryan some thirty years ago.

"The howl was raised," he said, "that all the millionaires would move to Europe. In this bill, I go further than Mr. Bryan proposed. I go further than any man has gone. This is the first excess profits tax bill to be offered in any state. To satisfy those who got scared at their own shadows, I modified the scale. I want the people to know how they are being skinned."

PEOPLE YOU KNOW.

About two hundred members of the state press association and their ladies and local newspaper people attended the reception Friday evening beginning at 9 o'clock at the executive mansion. Mrs. Harley Parsons directed the guests in the lower hall before they passed into the drawing room where Governor and Mrs. Bryan received. A trio furnished music during the receiving hours and played for the dancing in the ballroom later in the evening. A color motif of orange and green was carried out in the dining room where cakes, ices and candies were served. A huge centerpiece of double tulips and green and orange tapers in crystal sticks decorated the table. Mrs. Harry Dobbins and Mrs. James Lawrence presided at the table and were assisted in serving by Miss Fitzgerald, Miss Lynelle Greer, Miss Ruth Farquhar and Mrs. W. J. McVicker. Mrs. W. H. Smith invited the guests to the dining room. Dancing was enjoyed in the ballroom on the third floor during the latter part of the evening.

One hundred couples attended the formal dancing party of Alpha Theta Chi Friday evening at the Lincoln hotel. The ballroom was decorated in the fraternity colors, moss green and old gold. Over the large lights in the center of the room were arranged huge lanterns bedecked with gaudy colored birds. Punch and wafers were served during the dancing and fresh strawberries with whipped cream during intermission. The chaperons were Dean and Mrs. I. S. Cutter of Omaha, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Flansburg, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hinds, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Van Orsdel of Omaha, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Orr and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Dinsmore. Out-of-town guests who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Armstrong and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Trester of Omaha.

Mrs. W. T. Barstow, Mrs. J. C. Seacrest, Mrs. Maurice Deutsch, Mrs. Charles Roberts, Miss H. W. Meginnis, Miss Mariel Jones and Miss Laura Pfeiffer will be hostesses at the art exhibition today. This is to be the last day of the university exhibition.

DR. EGBERT CARRIED TO COURT ON A COT

Surgeon Lies Moaning as Complaint Is Read Charging Murder—Apparently Unaware of Proceedings.

HASTINGS, Neb., Feb. 23.—Carried into the court room on a cot, a blanket covering all save his eyes, Doctor C. L. Egbert was arraigned this afternoon charged with first degree murder for the shooting of his son-in-law Charles R. Gordon, Wednesday. He lay moaning as the county attorney read the complaint, apparently unaware of the proceedings.

L. B. Stiner, the surgeon's counsel, said his client did not desire to plead and Judge Turbyfill accordingly entered a plea of not guilty. The court overruled an application for permission to remove the prisoner from jail for medical treatment, and ordered that he remain where he is. Egbert's counsel asked that the transcript for the district court be prepared by nine o'clock Saturday, when the application for transferance to sanitarium will be renewed to Judge Dilworth. Sheriff Harm reports Doctor Egbert growing physically weaker.

W. A. Gordon, father of the slain man, arrived from his home in Tulepo, Mississippi, Friday. If the wife will consent, Gordon will take his son's body home for burial.

Information has come to light that suggests that about a year ago Gordon objected to his father-in-law giving drugs to his wife for headaches and there is the suggestion that this was the origin of the disagreement that finally ended in the shooting.

Dr. Egbert, it is conceded, had the largest surgical practice in this vicinity and the total number of his operations exceed those of any other surgeon who ever practiced here.

He recently built an attractive residence in the eastern section of the city and he is the owner of a well-stocked 240 acre ranch at Cameron Junction, Missouri, and which is looked after by a brother.

Some former patients have sent flowers to the surgeon in his cell. The jury summoned for the inquest found that the gunshot wound made by an automatic pistol was "feloniously inflicted" by Dr. Egbert, and no mention was made of any mitigating circumstances altho stories of insanity and the use of narcotics by the surgeon are current.

VETERAN TELEGRAPHER DIES

E. W. Coles, Former Tecumseh Man and Instructor in Signaling in Civil War, Passes Away.

WYMORE, Neb., Feb. 23.—Death late Thursday night removed one of the oldest and most widely known railroad men of southeastern Nebraska, when Edwin W. Coles, familiarly known as "Colonel" Coles, passed away suddenly at the home of Mrs. P. W. Gassell, at Kansas City, where he was temporarily staying. headquarters, whose jurisdiction extends over southeastern Nebraska and northeastern Kansas. He was born in Ohio in 1834. In 1853 he started what was destined to be one of the longest railway telegraphers' careers on record, when he accepted employment with the B. & O. railway at Zanesville, Ohio. The words were transmitted by machines perforating tape instead of with the present Morse alphabet.

He served a few terms as one of the old fashioned school masters of Ohio, and in 1856, went to Sydney, Australia, where he spent seven years as a "tape" telegraph operator, and a sheep raiser and wool merchant. In 1862 he returned to the United States and enlisted in the civil war at once, having charge at Washington, D. C., as instructor of automatic signalling of the war department. He was present with the signal corps of the union army during the siege at Harper's Ferry, and served thruout the war.

In 1880 he was placed at Tecumseh, as operator for the Burlington railway, at which time all the territory now handled by three divisions was under the jurisdiction of D. E. Thompson, as superintendent, at Lincoln. In 1889, Mr. Coles was appointed station agent at Burchard, and was returned to Tecumseh in 1893, and went to the Vesta agency in 1903, from which station he was retired on a fifty dollar per month pension by Chicago officials of the road in 1912. Mrs. Coles was buried at Tecumseh twenty-five years ago.

The only child, wife of E. P. Bracken, vice president of the Burlington, was buried at Tecumseh fifteen years ago. Besides Mr. Bracken, the only remaining near relative is L. E. Winters, a nephew, of LeCompton, Kansas. Mr. Coles spent his declining years with these relatives and visiting at large cities on the Burlington. Burial will be at Tecumseh at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

FAIRBURY VOTES FOR BONDS

Those Favoring New High School Building in Majority.

FAIRBURY, Neb., Feb. 23.—A two hundred thousand dollar bond issue for the erection of a new high school carried here Friday, the vote being, for bonds, 1,190; against, 496.

The receiver of the Farmers' State bank of Allen has appealed to the supreme court from a judgment allowing claims against the depositors' guaranty fund in favor of Charles Lovell and two others. These three were the owners of liberty bonds. When they were blow par and the bank in need of a better financial showing, the banker offered to givethem certificates of deposit, taking the bonds at par, with an agreement that if they later reached par he would pay them cash or keep the bonds. The banker was thus able to add these to the assets of the bank under the heading of bonds owned. The receiver contends that the certificates of deposit represent only a general claim against the bank because of these circumstances, but the court below said they were entitled to rimbursment from the guaranty fund.

H. C. HOTALING.

Executive secretary of the National Editorial association who spoke Friday afternoon before the Nebraska Press association on the benefits of the parent organization to the state organizations.

KROH MADE PRESIDENT

MRS. MARIE WEEKES SELECTED FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

First Time in History of Press Association Woman Has Been Selected for Post.

The Nebraska press association Friday afternoon elected officers for the ensuing year at its fiftieth annual convention at the Lindell hotel. For the first time in the history of the association a woman was elected vice president. This automatically places her in line for president of the organization in 1924. The woman is Mrs. Marie Weekes of Norfolk. The new officers:

President, J. S. Kroh, Ogallala.

Vice president, Mrs. Marie Weekes, Norfolk.

Secretary, O. O. Buck, Harvard.

Treasurer, F. O. Edgecombe, Geneva.

Members of the executive board for two years, Jaseph Alden, York, Republican; H. D. Flory, Pawnee Republican H. D. Leggett, Ord Quiz. For the one year term, J. H. Sweet, Nebraska City News; C. A. Carlson, E. R. Purcell of the Custer County Chief, is the hold over member.

J. S. Kroh is serving as senator from the Thirty-first district which is composed of eleven counties. Mrs. Marie Weekes is one of the editors and publishers of the Norfolk Press. O. O. Buck represents the Harvard Courier. F. O. Edgecombe is the editor and publisher of the Geneva Signal.

The association will amend the constitution permitting it to meet in other cities of the state besides Omaha and Lincoln. Lincoln, however, is considered the favorite annual convention place especially during the time that the state legislature functions. The election of the officers was unanimous. O. O. Buck has served five years as secretary and F. O. Edgecombe the same period as treasurer.

The value of the national editorial association to state associations was told by H. G. Hotaling, executive secretary. In the past six years the national body has been turning to the business end and is accomplishing a great work, according to the secretary. The national was credited with stopping the paper profiteers by importing print. The result was that it took a drop from 13 and 12 cents to 8 cents. It had also helped to give country publishers a fair deal in foreign advertising, and to cut down the cost of half-tone engravings.

Mr. Hotaling advised against the cutting of the subscription rates when labor and materials are still around the war figures. He saw no benefit anyway in cutting the price because he had never found that the increase circulation justified that step. The national association will meet in July at Saratoga, N. Y. Delegates will have the opportunity to visit Niagara Falls, the great lakes and the Adirondack mountains. Secretary Hotaling stated that the national editorial association represents the best in journalism. Newspaper men should occupy a position as honorable in the community as that of bankers and other business men and should receive adequate financial rewards.

Mrs. J. S. Kroh of the Keith County News gave an address on "Country Correspondents." She said that it is vital to country newspapers to have reliable correspondents. As she saw it, the people in rural communities read everything in the home paper including the advertisements. She found the greatest success along this line in the co-operation of the newspaper with the public schools. This gives reliable correspondence. Under this plan the teachers gather the news and it is whipped into shape and sent to its destination. Experience had taught that small communities need newspaper representation. Such news gathering establishes a bond between the people and their home paper.

The subject of H. D. Flory of Pawnee City, was "Building a Reserve." It was his idea that if a reserve of good will is built the cash reserve will take care of itself. He was inclined to adopt the slogan of many business houses, "The customer is always right."

"We should speak cheerfully to people, see the viewpoint of the other fellow and never carry around a grouch" he said. He believed that in the rural districts the people care more for where "the Smith family spent Sunday than to know what the subjects of the funny papers did yesterday.

The afternoon was largely devoted to talking shop. Agency commissions, price cutting, creating home advertising and a business system in the country printing office were live topics.

The beginning of the organization of country weekly newspapers known as the "country newspapers' incorporated," was related Friday evening before an evening session of the convention of the association by Herman Roe, of Northfield, Minn. The speaker touched on the cost of advertising space in the big dailies and in the weekly publications, and of methods of selling space in each. He also spoke on the political relations of the different press associations with national administrations.

THEODORE HURTZ, PIONEER, IS DEAD

Passed Away at Home at 730 South Eleventh Street at 2:45 p. m. Friday—Lived in Lincoln for Forty-seven Years.

Theodore Hurtz, eighty-one years old, father of Leonard E. Hurtz, former general manager of the Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph company, died at his home at 730 South Eleventh street at 2:45 p. m. Friday. He had been in failing health for some years. He was a Lincoln pioneer, coming to this city in 1886.

Mr. Hurtz was born in Vienna, Austria, January 30, 1842. He was graduated from the Vienna Polytechnic college in 1863 as a civil engineer. He served as an engineer during the construction of the Suez canal and did railroad location and construction work in north Africa. He succeeded his father as manager of the steel manufacturing business in Vienna.

He came to America in 1871, and engaged in newspaper business in New York and Chicago. He then moved to northern Kansas where he engaged in the farm loan business. He was married on December 28, 1880 to Margaret Collins of Belleville, Kas.

Mr. Hurtz came to Lincoln in 1886 as owner of a patent covering the manufacture of artificial stone, the forerunner of the present cement industry. After some years, ill health caused him to dispose of his business and to go south. He later returned to Lincoln and in recent years his health compelled him to retire from active business. Two children besides his wife, survive him. They are Leonard E. Hurtz, secretary of the Fairmont Creamery company of Omaha and Fred J. Hurtz, who is a paint manufacturer in Chicago. Funeral arrangement will be announced later.

LINCOLN MAN KILLS SELF AT ELK CREEK

Arthur Schultz Takes Life With Revolver While in Bed—Trouble With Wife Thought to Have Led to It.

TECUMSEH, Neb., Feb. 23.—Arthur Schultz, twenty-nine, of Lincoln, visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Schultz, in Elk Creek, this county, committed suicide at 7:30 this morning. He killed himself while still in bed, using a revolver and sending a bullet into his heart.

Schultz is reported to have had trouble with his young wife, and she had left him. She was formerly Miss Lulu Belden and her parents live at Crete. Schultz was reared in this county, but had been working at day labor in Lincoln. He is survived by his wife, a four-year-old daughter, Norma, his parents, a brother and two sisters.

Schultz was a member of the Elk Creek Methodist church and stood well in his former home community. The county attorney, John Davey, visited the Schultz home, and decided an inquest was not necessary. The funeral will be at the Elk Creek Methodist church, Saturday afternoon, and the burial will be in the Elk Creek cemetery.

BRYAN BILLS EXTRAVAGANT

AT LEAST WHEN CONSIDERED IN LIGHT OF PRINTING.

Will Cost Upwards of $2,500 to Print Once With Two More Printings to Come If Estimates True.

The first printing of the four and forty bills of Governor Bryan will cost probably something over $2,000. Admission to this was made Saturday morning by A. B. Thatcher, chairman of the house committee on printing. Mr. Thatcher is an economist. He issued a deep sigh when he received an estimate of cost.

He held before him one of the four and forty. This is a little 67-page booklet or bill providing for the state health department which he shifts to his own shoulders. Before enactment of the code, it was under three state officers.

Chairman Thatcher procured a price of $134.46 for the first printing of this bill. There are fourteen more bills by the governor of approximately the same length and twenty-nine bills somewhat shorter. This $134.46 first printing cost goes largely for re-printing the present law with the public welfare department stricken and department of health substituted. Instead of a secretary, the governor proposes a deputy-director.

About the only new matter in the bill pertains to the department of child hygiene which the governor proposes to place under the state superintendent. H. R. 681 is largely another printing of existing laws, necessitated by the governor's desire to shift a gear or two. It carries all the present laws relating to licensing of doctors and nurses, examinations, of all sorts of healer registration and the like.

If these four and forty bills or any part of them become laws, they will be re-printed for general distribution. Then there must come a third printing in the session laws.

Chairman Thatcher announced house expenditures to date, including salaries of members and employes, mileage and incidentals at $67,000.

He referred to the attorney general the matter of salary of Representative Haycock, democrat, successor to Representative Schneringer, resigned. Mr. Haycock drew his voucher last week for $275 when other members were getting their second installments. Mr. Schneringer received $250 and mileage. It is said that he was here long enough to earn it. Mr. Haycock also received mileage. Mr. Thatcher was given to understand that the democratic member from Custer would expect payment in full for the entire session. The attorney general's office advises him that Representative Haycock is entitled only to $800 less the amount paid Mr. Schneringer.

LAW VIOLATED ON COAST

O. W. Meier Tells Democratic Club of What He Has Seen and Heard in Washington.

"If you want to see violation of the liquor laws go to the Pacific or Atlantic coasts," asid O. W. Meier, who has just returned from Washington. D. C., to the democratic luncheon club Saturday noon at the Grand hotel. "I have been in both directions," said Mr. Meier. "The real stuff seems to be procured. Most of what is found in Nebraska is moonshine."

Mr. Meier said that W. J. Bryan was in Washington while he was there and was apparently held in higher esteem than any other man in the country. "In my opinion," he said, "Mr. Bryan would be the strongest candidate we could have for president."

A visit to the supreme court was found of the greatest interest by Mr. Meier. He spoke with the highest respect of the utterances from the bench of the eminent jurists and the variety of complicated questions which came before them. He listened to a case wehre a high caste Hindu was adjudged not entitled to citizenship altho of the Aryan race.

Mr. Meier heard the argument before congress in relation to acceptance of the British bond proposition. He found democrats in general approved of the acceptance. Senator Hitchcock voted against the proposition. "The administration is like a ship without a rudder," said Mr. Meier, "but Mr. Harding was not elected as a leader and his re-election as president is favored because he has done what was expected of him."

Three law enforcement bills now in committee of the legislature, house rolls, 451, 582 and 583, were discussed by Sterling F. Mutz. Tom Carroll, law enforcement officer was present, and explained the policy of Mr. Bryan and himself was not to encroach upon duties being performed properly by other officers. C. L. Clark also spoke of the law enforcement division.

TRIED TO SOLVE MYSTERY; IS FIGHTING HIS RETIREMENT

A fight is expected in congress over the order by President Harding that Major General Adelbert Cronkhite, who commanded the eightieth division in France, shall retire. General Cronkhite's enforced retirement, it is said, is the result of his unceasing efforts to solve the mystery of the death by shooting of his son, Maj. A. P. Cronkhite, who was killed at Camp Lewis, Washington, in 1918.

HOLD HEARING ON COMPLAINT

RAIL COMMISSIONERS LISTEN TO OPPOSING FACTIONS.

Grand Island and Hastings Jobbers Line Up in Fight Over Burlington Train Service by Way of Aurora.

The jobbers of Hastings and Grand Island sat on opposite sides of the table ein the railway commission hearing room Saturday, with the people of Giltner and Trumbull enacting the role of innocent bystanders, and disputed over the justness of a change recently ordered in train service between Grand Island and Kearney by way of Aurora and Hastings.

At the present time a freight train leaves Aurora, which is on the same main line of the Burlington as Grand Island, at 5:30 in the morning. It reaches Hastings at 7:20, and leaves at 7:50, reaching Kearney at 11. It starts back at 11:45, reaching Hastings at 2:20, leaves there at 3:40 and gets to Aurora at 5:10.

There is also a passenger train that leaves Kearney at 8:30 in the morning, reaching Hastings at 9:48, and leaving at 11:55 for Aurora, which it reaches at 12:55. Returning it leaves Aurora at 2:10, reaches Hastings at 3:10, and leaves there at 3:45 for Kearney, which is reached at 5:15.

Under the proposed schedule the passenger train runs as now, but there is no morning freight from Aurora. The freight train will leave Hastings at 3:40 and gets back from Aurora at 7 o'clock.

The result is to deprive Giltner of its morning mail and newspapers, leaves its business men but two hours in which to answer mail and if anybody goes to Hastings to shop they must stay all night. The present schedule has been in force a long, long time, and they want it retained. Hastings is also represented by its chamber of commerce. Protests are also filed by newspaper publishers at Lincoln and Hastings. The jobbers of Hastings say that this new arrangement will let Grand Island into their trade territory on equal terms with them, which are not justified by location. They cannot get their goods into Grand Island territory with equal facility.

Grand Island shipments to points beyond Holdrege, on the St. Francis branch and on the line to Red Cloud and beyond are now twenty-four hours later getting to destination than is proposed.

GRAND ARMY REDUCED RATES

R. meeting to be held in Lincoln, May 1 to 3. One fare and one-ninth of the current fares for the round trip, on the identification certificate plan, has been allowed for G. A. R. veterans and their wives, from points in Nebraska, also from Julesburg, Colo. Auxiliary organization members and their dependents and one dependent member of the family of G. A. R. veterans other than their wives are to be given one fare and one-half on the regular certificate plan instead of the round trip identification certificate plan. Round trip tickets will be sold upon the presentation of certificates on April 27 to May 3, inclusive, return limit May 7.

VOTING WAR HARDY'S TEST

TEXAS REPRESENTATIVE SAYS ZERO HOUR STRUCK THEN.

Was Pacifist But When He Realized Conflict Was Imminent He Voted to Enter the Maelstrom.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—"Zero hour struck for me—a pacifist—when the question of war with Germany came to a vote," said Representative Rufus Hardy of Texas.

That grave and solemn occasion in the house when congressmen were called upon to translate the will of the people into law—a law that meant certain death, maiming and disease to thousands, even many of their own sons—was described today by the scholarly old Texan who voluntarily retires March 4.

But the "sage of Corsicana" goes back to watch the plow turn his "black waxie" acres in Navarro county with the knowledge that, despite his conviction of the unrighteousness of wars, he did not shirk his responsibility when the test came. He told how the battle of conscious was fought and won before he stood up to be counted in the presence of his fellow members and overflowing galleries.

Born in 1855, Hardy was just old enough to have the horrors, the tragedy and the tears of the civil war imprinted vividly on his childish memory. He grew to manhood amid the strife of reconstruction in east Texas where the last stand of the "unreconstructed rebels" was made, a thorough pacifist as a result of his experiences.

Still a Pacifist.

"Instead of growing up with the customary boyish desire to be a soldier, I had no use for martial music and clanking sabers," said Hardy. "I was a pacifist and still am. I voted for war, but I was in a torment coming to the decision I knew was right.

"My vote would have made no difference in the result. War was inevitable before the house acted. President Wilson had asked for authority and the senate had already voted it. But the fact that it required more than seventeen hours for the house to come to a decision shows that other men were not taking their responsibilities lightly.

"From the beginning of the war, I had opposed America going in. Just three months before, I want home and defended the president for keeping us out of war. I defended his course all thru the 1916 campaign.

"In the meantime, I began to study the 'blood and iron' philosophy of Bernhardi and Nietsche and the 'Gott and me' idea of the kaiser.

"Germany with her 'might makes right' policy carried out thru her murderous U-boats, threatened to tie up our commerce and it was evident she proposed to make the United States pay indemnity if she was successor in her war on Great Britain and France.

Point of Self Defense.

"We had been attacked. It had come to a point of self-defense. The supreme hour had struck.

"All these things revolved in my mind as the debate grew hot and furious. The house was in a tummult of emotion. It was nearing three o'clock in the morning, yet the galleries were packed.

"When my name was called on that eventful roll call, constrained against all feeling, I voted for war. I did so knowing it meant the blood of thousands of our dearest sons and the expenditure of untold billions in treasure, which would place a burden of debt on our people for a hundred years. It was the biggest, gravest thing I ever did in public life and I am proud of it."

APPROVE CO-ED COLLEGES

MAJORITY OF 1,000 UNIVERSITY PEOPLE FOR IT.

Four-fifths of Women Unhesitating in Replies That Daughters Will Follow Footsteps.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 24.—Mingling of the sexes in schools is all right. Co-educational institutions are the proper places to send one's children.

So say the majority of 1,000 university people; 600 of them women, questioned in a survey by M. V. O'Shea, University of Wisconsin professor of education, with the cooperation of the U. S. bureau of education and fourteen important colleges and universities.

Four-fifths of the women questioned replied unhesitatingly that they would send their daughters to a coed school. All but fifty-five of the total declared that boys and girls should be educated together in high schools.

The questions were sent to 5,000 women graduates of classes between 1898 and 1905, from Northwestern, Minnesota, Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio, Chicago and Iowa. Leading coeducational universities; and from Bryn Mawr, Radcliffe, Wellesley, Goucher, Smith, Simmons, and Colby, foremost among the exclusive colleges for women. In addition 100 upper-class women students an dabout 300 upper-class men students at the University of Wisconsin were questioned by personal representatives.

The women also were asked if they would recommend that their daughters take the same course that they took, and whether they would take the same courses, "if they had their education to do over again."

Home Makers Not Satisfied.

Home-makers, social workers and mothers generally expressed themselves as dissatisfied with the preparation that women's colleges and coeducational schools gave them for life. Teachers on the whole were satisfied with their preparation.

The graduates of the colleges for women, however, complained more generally of the lack of opportunities to pursue courses leading to home-making and motherhood than did the graduates of the coed schools. The oldest graduates, from 1898 to 1902, expressed the greatest dissatisfaction with the preparation for life furnished by their alma maters. Typical comments were:

What Women Regret.

"I regret that neither in high school nor in college did I have an opportunity to take domestic science."

"Our small high schools need more work in physical training for all, not just basketball for the one who likes it."

"Women are better prepared to play their proper role in life if they have the opportunity to work and play with boys and men in high school and in college."

"The mingling in daily life seems more normal than life in segregated groups."

"A girl will never get a man's point of view if she is segregated."

"Most of the flirting is harmless, quite normal and thoroly enjoyable. If these impulses are given free expression under proper control, it is better than repression."

Too Mich Dancing.

One of the minority who favored women's colleges declared, "women have too little of segregated athletics and too much dancing and fraternity teas."

Ninety out of the 100 women still in the university favored coëducation, declaring that contact with men was good for both, especially women.

Eighty-seven per cent of the several hundred men favored coeducation. "Women have shown that in cultivating their minds it is not necessary to neglect personal appearance and accomplishment," was the trend or their reasonings.

The minority 13 per cent of the men declared they "saw too much of women," and that "they are not so thrilled by them as they would be if they met them less frequently."

TELLS OF RUHR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—"French soldiers entered the car and cried 'raus.' A number of Germans jumped out the windows. I showed my American passport but French soldiers got behind me and poked their bayonets into my back, so I had to go. They threw off my baggage and one bag was broken open on the platform."

This is the description of her experiences in the Ruhr given by Mrs. Louise Geisnell of Pittsburgh. She exhibited two holes in the back of her coat, made, she said, by bayonets.

WOULD SLAY PAVING LAW

FARMERS GATHERING TO KILL OLD ONE AND DEFEAT H. R. 35.

W. F. Dale Addressed Gathering at County Court House Saturday Morning and Promised a Crowd for Afternoon.

A group of twenty Lancaster county farmers gathered at the county court house Saturday morning to work up a larger gathering for the afternoon with a view to do what they can to kill the present county paving law and defeat passage of its proposed substitute, H. R. 35, now on general file, which was introduced by Representative Fred Egger as a substitute.

The farmers expressed the opinion that Mr. Egger was induced to present H. R. 35 thru a series of misunderstandings, and that he doesn't express the wishes of the farmers in the proposed substitute.

The meeting was called by W. F. Dale, who stated that he had made every effort to have the bill slaughtered in committee, but that during his absence it had been placed on file.

Mr. Dale stated that in paving district No. 38, covering about five miles of road, approximately $60,000 a mile was spent on paving. He wanted to know if the farmers can afford to have $60,000 spent on some miles of road when there are so many miles which greatly need an expenditure of about $1,000 for repairs. He indicated that in his opinion $60,000 a mile is pretty high for paving anway.

The meeting was to re-convene at 1 p. m. Saturday.

Department of Justice Accountant Says Alamito Company "Made Up" Deficit.

OMAHA, Feb. 24.—A deficit of $10,000 in the accounts of the Alamito Dairy company found in an audit by Joseph Froggatt and company, New York accountants, was changed by them in July, 1917, to a surplus of $25,000 by setting up the "good will" of the company at $65,000 and deducting certain other liabilities of the company, according to testimony of Robert M. Huston, expert department of justice accountant in the trial of Leroy Corliss and other officers of the defunct Waterloo Creamery company for alleged mail frauds.

The court adjourned until Monday morning to allow certain jurors to attend to private business. Huston will finish his testimony Monday.

MARRIAGE AFTER A FIGHT

Judge Reid Says Ceremony for a Mexican Who Had Just Been Fined in Police Court.

Jesus Martinez and Mrs. Guadalupe Yanez, Mexicans, were married by County Judge Reid Saturday morning at the court house

Jesus Martinez had just paid a fine of $10 and costs, and Mrs. Yanez had just been paroled to Mrs. Victoria D'Ortez, interpreter, after a session of police court, in which Antonio Yanez, also a Mexican, was fined $10 and costs. They were charged with disturbing the peace in a shooting scrape at First and J streets Friday afternoon.

The names given on the marriage license record do not correspond with the names on the police blotter, but Judge Reid said they were the same parties. It was alleged that the fight took place on account of jealousy between the men over the woman. The woman said the difficulty arose over a money matter.

Some of Ringside Critics Differ as to Verdict of Tunney--Greb Titular Bout

HERO OF MARINES WINS BACK TITLE

Tunney Puts Himself in Class With Favored Few Who Have Comeback When He Beats Greb in Fifteen Rounds.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Gene Tunney, hero of the Marines during the war, joined Stanley Ketchel, Pete Herman and Joe Lynch last night in that select little group of "formers who came back" when he defeated Harry Greb in a fifteen-round bout in Madison Square Garden and regained the American light-heavyweight championship.

The decision was popular in the New York section of the crowd that packed the Garden to the rafters but it was not unanimously approved.

Several competent critics thought Greb had won and others thought that the worst the Pittsburgh boy should have been given was a draw.

It was the unanimous opinion that it was a very poor fight and if preliminary boys had been furnishing the exhibition instead of champions they would have been thrown out of the ring.

Greb and Tunney milled and wrestled like two awkward freight handlers. Even if Greb had been close to winning the decision, his foul work probably would have influenced the judges against him.

What New York Thought.

Herald—"Greb had the advantage over Tunney in the majority of the fifteen rounds."

Times—"Tunney carried off nine of the 15 rounds."

Grantland Rice—"At the very worst Greb might have got a draw."

Tribune—"A draw would have been just."

American—"Tunney easy victor. Case of a clean cut lad beating Greb at his own game."

World—"Greb used everything but Mexican spurs. On last night's showing Tunney can always lick Greb."

News—"A draw would not have hurt either man."

My Thirty Years in Baseball

by John J McGraw

A Defense of the Sandlot Player—Baseball as a Training School for Other Professions.

In an earlier chapter I made the statement—made it advisedly and sincerely—that the college player developed into a ball player much more easily and readily than the boy brought up on the town lots with less advantage. I declared as between the two I would naturally prefer the college man because of his having had the benefit of mental training.

To illustrate the advantage of the college man I pointed out that the boy with a trained mind usually tried to find his faults and correct them, while the sand lot player often tried to hide his. In his ignorance he thought he could get away with it.

An Erroneous Impression.

I am still of that belief, but it is possible that some old-timers have gained an erroneous impression from what I said.

"Did you mean to say," an old friend writes, "that all the great players are college men?"

Of course I didn't. I was merely pointing out a principle, the benefit of trained thought. As a matter of fact, very few of our really great stars have been college men. That merely proves my theory, tho at first the two statements may be confusing.

The fact that ball players have become stars of the first magnitude without the benefit of early college training merely emphasizes their greatness. By hard work and application they have overcome the handicap. Any one of them will tell you how much he missed those early advantakes. Had he possessed that early knowledge he would have been a great star much quicker.

Looking overy my selections for the three great all-star teams it will be noticed that very few of them have been college men. That is due partly to the fact that in the early days of baseball very few college men took up the game as a profession. Even in this day the college man usually goes into baseball as a temporary means of livelihood. Love of the game causes many of them to stick. The mediocre ones drop out and go into other occupations or professions for which they have been trained.

Sisler Is College Man.

George Sisler, for instance, is a college man. With his natural physical qualifications and his mental training he jumped into fame almost immediately. No long spell of seasoning was required. Another instance is that of Frankie Frisch. He is a college boy, coming to us direct from Fordham university. Frisch's alert mind grasped the idea of professional baseball immediately. He would notice his own faults almost as soon as I would. Without hesitation he would come to me for advice. He was quick to put theory and practice together.

On the other hand, take players like Willie Keeler, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker or myself. While Cobb had the benefit of considerable early education, he was not actually a college man, I am told. The rest of us didn't even have that advantage. As a result, we had to work our way up by slow stages, always conscious of our early disadvantages. But we overcame it and reached the top.

The lack of this early opportunity was made so plain to Hughey Jennings and myself that we spent three or four winters trying to get a college education, even after we had become big leaguers.

Must Use His Head.

Whether the player be a sand lot man or a college boy, he cannot progress without using his mind. The town lot boy, therefore, is entitled to all the more credit when he becomes a star.

The man with a stubborn mind, who thinks he can advance physically without improving himself mentally, rarely becomes a star. I don't know of one.

Mere book learning will not do the trick, either. A boy to improve must have a chance to observe the ordinary conventions of life and the ways of intelligent people off the field. I have made it a point to see that all of my young players had this opportunity.

INTER-FRAT TRACK MEET DRAWS CROWD

Delta Tau Delta Maintains Hold on First Place—Many Changes Are Made in the List of Standings.

A crowd of 300 spectators were on the drill field north of the Social Science hall, Friday afternoon, watching the staging of the track events in which Delta Tau Delta has taken a foremost position in the winnings. The fourth day's events included the hurling of the discus and the mile run. In the mile run, many of the contestants were unable to finish the distance in scoring time.

The placings in the standings of the fraternities after the scoring of the Friday matches were changed from the standing of other days. The Deltas have a tenacious grip on the first place and have maintained it since the starting of the meet. Alpha Sigma Phi moved into second place; Acacia placed third, Sigma Phi Epsilon, fourth; and the Farm House holds fifth place.

Haskell Runs Best Mile.

Haskall, Alpha Sig, made the best time in the mile, covering the distance in 4 minutes and 57 seconds. Hattman, Farm House; Higgins, Farm House; and Jetter, Alpha Sig; made good time in this event.

In the discus hurl, Page, Acacia, made a throw of 109 feet 10 inches. Meyers and Parks, both Delts, hurled the plate more than 114 feet 6 inches.

The mile event was the most unpopular one which has been staged, only forty-five men reporting. Entries for the discus hurl numbered fifty-eight.

The standings of the fraternities after eight events had been stage were as follows:

1.	Delta Tau Delta	11.065
2.	Alpha Sigma Phi	9.957
3.	Acacia	9.834

Havelock Defeated by Wahoo Quintet

The Wahoo high school basketball cagesters won a 29 to 12 victory from the Shoptown five on the suburban court, Friday night. Wahoo held the advantage thruout the contest, the Havelock team being fatigued from previous battles during the week. The first half of the game, which ended 14 to 9 for Wahoo, was decidedly slow. The last half of the game was livened up by a comeback which was apparent in both aggregations. Hamilton of Wahoo and Deady of Havelock were the stellar performers of the contest. The summary:

HUSKERS DEFEATED BY WASHINGTON U

Lose Cage Contest by 34 to 32 Score—Game Carried Two Extra Periods to Break Tie Registers.

ST. LOUIS, Mo, Feb. 23.—Washington university basketball team defeated the University of Nebraska quintet here Friday night by a score of 34 to 32. It was one of the most bitterly contested battles staged this year at 'Francis' gymnasium and required two extra periods of play before a decision could be reached.

Washington took an early lead, but Nebraska soon rallied and the first half closed with the Pikers leading at 18 to 12. Washington's defense was weakened by the absence of Lyle and Schnaus who were suffering from injuries.

In the second half, with five minutes of play remaining, Cozier and Usher led an attack which gave the Cornhuskers the lead for the first time at 24 to 23. Minner, Washington's forward whose brilliant playing was a feature of the game, evened the count with a free throw. Cosier then threw a field goal, but Miner did the same for the Pikers and the score was 26 to 26 as the second half ended.

In the first extra period, Cosier and Usher scored twice for Nebraska, but Minner and Wagener tallied for Washington and it also ended in a deadlock at 30 to 30. Usher made it 32 to 30 for Nebraska in the final period, but Minner threw two field goals to give the Pikers the game at 34 to 32.

Minner led the scoring with a total of 24. Cosier with 14 points and Usher with 10 led Nebraska's attack.

Win 27 to 17 Victory—Red and Black Quintet Exhibits a Fast Brand of Basketball.

The Lincoln high school basketball squad won a 27 to 17 victory from the Grand Island cagesters on the Armory rectangle, Friday night. Clever team work and ability to shoot baskets placed the Links as the offensive five. Grand Island was outclassed in speed, teamwork, and basket shooting.

At the start, Lincoln gained a point advantage by finding the loop on a field attempt. From that time until the blowing of the final whistle, Lincoln led the scoring. The score at the half favored the Links, 17 to 9.

Links play Fast Ball.

Lincoln's offensive was one of the fastest that has been exhibited on the Armory court during the present high school season. The defensive which the Red and Black quintet used made the visiting five work for the basket shoots they tried. Grand Island was unable to locate the loop when they found an opportunity to toss for a score.

"Jug" Brown, captain of the Lincoln quintet, led the scoring for his team with a register of four field goals. "Skipper" Olds found the loop on three attempts. Mandeville, center on the Grand Island five, located the basket on four field shots. Kelso, Grand Island guard, played a fast conspicuous game. The summary:

FARRELL BELIEVES YANKS WILL REPEAT

Chicago Sox and Detroit Tigers Figured as New York's Strongest Competitors—Other Timely Sport Topics.

By Henry L. Farrell.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—After the New York Yankees had blown the last world's series and made one of the sorriest showings a champion ball club ever made in a title series, "Cap" Huston, part owner of the team, gave the boys a regular army "talking to."

He know the way to a ball player's heart and in an appeal for them to come back and hustle in the 1923 pennant race, he mentioned that they would be playing in a new stadium that could accommodate 65,000.

"Your end of the world's series money next year will be about $10,000 each, if you get into the series," he said.

This new stadium will be a big factor in the next pennant race. With the exception of one more veteran southpaw pitcher, the Yanks probably will start the season with the same personnel, but it should not be the same team.

The White Sox of 1923 will be an improved ball team and so will the Detroit Tigers. Both are dangerous teams, but the Yanks, with some hustle in them, should win the pennant.

If the temptation of that $10,000 does not speed them up, the Colonels had better get out the wrecking crew.

Despite belief to the contrary, the new stadium should not curb the hitting of Babe Ruth. It isn't reasonable to figure that the owners of the Yanks would spend two million dollars to hurt their biggest asset. It doesn't follow that the new Yankee stadium was built for Ruth, however. The right field foul line is about ten feet shorter than the Polo grounds, but the right field stands in the new stadium do not cut in as sharply as they do at the Giants' home. Many American league sluggers who dropped pop fly homers into the stands at the Polo grounds will not get so many next year, but Ruth will get them, because the majority of the drives he made when he was going good were high up into the upper stands and would have been homers on any field.

SUZANNE LENGLEN SHOWS FEMININE TRAITS HERE.

Age and weight are delicate things to discuss about feminine athletes, but it is said that Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, the dashing tennis queen, is becoming too portly to wield the racquet with her old time skill. One of the critics in a Paris paper wrote recently that the additional poundage Suzanne had taken on in the last year had reduced her game thirty per cent.

The temperament of the French girl seems to have increased also. Several times during the early winter tournaments she became so incensed at errors in her game that she smashed her racquets on the ground.

SEVERAL GOOD PLAYERS GOT AWAY FROM BARROW.

Whenever Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yanks, hears about a manager letting a good ball player get away from him, he gets a kick out of it.

"I let three of them get away from me," Barrow says.

"Back in 1905, when I was managing Indianapolis, a friend told me that Augusta had a great second baseman, Clyde Engel, that I could get cheap. Later he added the information that Augusta had a great young outfielder named Ty Cobb. I could get the pair for $800, or one of them for $500. I let the deal slip.

"In 1902 when I was handling the Toronto club, a friend begged me to give a young second baseman with the Troy club a chance, Johnny Evers. I could have gotten him for $500, but before I decided, the Cubs grabbed him.

"I also turned down the recommendation of a good judge when he told me that Rube Oldring was a fine prospect."

Washington on Preparedness.

George Washington was a staunch supporter of military training and preparation for the defense of the country in case of necessity. Feb. 9, 1776, just before the declaration of independence, he wrote:

"To expect the same service from raw and undisciplined recruits as from veteran soldiers is to expect what never did and perhaps never will happen."

In the fourth year of the war, Aug 20, 1780, he wrote:

"Had we formed a permanent army in the beginning....we should not have had to retreat with a handful of men across the Delaware in 1776, trembling for the fate of America." ....we should not have been the greatest part of the war inferior to the enemy, indebted for our safety to their inactivity, enduring frequently the mortification of seeing inviting opportunitiess to ruin them pass unimproved for want of a force which the country was completely unable to afford and of seeing the country ravaged, abused, murdered with impunity from the same cause."—Detroit News.

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—All grain prices were lower at the close of the Chicago board of trade today as a result of heavy selling, which developed late in the session.

Wheat, aided by a fair export demand and bullish news from Washington, did not react to the dip to as large an extent as other grains. A bulge in prices developed shortly after the opening and every indication pointed to a rally until late in the day. The demand of commission houses was good from the start and the trading was free.

Corn was the weakest of the grains with no export trade to offset the heavy buying. Cables from the Argentine, with reports of continued rains and a greatly improved outlook for the crop, had a bullish effect on the market.

Oats led the selling which caused the dip toward the close under pressure of leading elevator interests.

Grain prices were irregular at the opening of the Chicago board of trade today.

Wheat was fractionally higher as the result of a stronger Liverpool market and reports from the United Kingdom of an increased inquiry from British millers. Continental buyers were more active and a fair export business was reported. Export business overnight was reported as 400,000 bushels, most of which was durum. Warmer weather with rain promised relief to several sections of the southwestern wheat belt badly in need of moisture. Local receipts were 20 cars.

Corn registered fractional declines at the opening as the result of lower markets at Liverpool and Buenos Aires. Rains continued in Argentine and the crop was greatly benefited, according to cables. Receipts were 350 cars.

Oats and rye were irregular, altho oats showed a stronger tone.

Grain Market Opinions.

Lamson Bros. & Co.: Present prices discounty frequently reiterated bearish news.

Hulburd Warren & Chandler: We believe will be in demand on all weak spots. Corn and oats should be bought on breaks.

Bartlett-Frazier & Co.: We believe in higher prices regardless of the action of yesterday's market.

E. Lowitz & Co.: We believe profitable sales can be made on the hard spot.

Stein Alstrin: It is likely that prices will work somewhat lower.

Thomson McKinnon: It seems inevitable that the weight of wheat supplies will bring lower prices. Until the demand for coarse grains broadens, values will probably drag downward.

J. E. Bennett & Co.: Winter wheat crop reports should soon play a more important part as a market factor. Leading holders of corn still remain confident of their position.

Logan & Bryan: Further liquidation seems likely and we favor sales on the bulges.

Simpson: Think the patient holders will not have to wait long for a favorable change in the tendency of the market.—Lamson.

Wall Street Journal Review.

Chicago Tribune Report.

CHICAGO Feb. 24.—Sentiment among local traders is almost unanimously bearish but commission houses express a strong belief that the selling side should be avoided especially on the breaks. Commission houses sold considerable corn yesterday and a number of pit longs went out of their holdings.

Export sales yesterday: durum wheat 400,000; corn 200,000 bushels. It was understood there were bids for liberal quantities of wheat close to a working basis.—Lamson.

Journal of Commerce Report.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Sentiment is bearish. Few traders see any incentive for investment purchases of wheat as long as the export demand continues so unsatisfactory. It is believed other grains will be dominated largely by wheat.—Lamson.

Housman's Letter.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—We believe that in a way the action of the market yesterday pointed to the existence of a large short interest; that is to say traders who have thought and for that matter, still think reaction is due, expected to have an opportunity to cover following announcement of the rise in re-discount rates and the fact that there was not more selling may well have meant that outstanding short interest was enlarged. We think the market acted well yesterday and will soon recover from the semblance of irregularity.—Lamson.

Coming Events in Stocks.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Chino copper: Revival of activity in Chino copper is attracting speculation attention to this issue. The investigation does not indicate that last year's earnings while showing a recovery are anything to boast of but the increase in the demand for copper metal is expected to develop a different story for 1923.

American Can—Well informed interests which accumulated a large block of Can after an exhaustive analysis as to the intrinsic value of the stock are now long. It is believed to interests close to the company that the dividend rate will be increased later.—Lamson.

Stock Market Opinions.

Lamson Bros. & Co.: We believe distribution will be completed at higher levels.

Housman & Co.: We would buy Steel, Locomotives, Can, Products and Refining Smelting; So-Pac, Pere Marquette, St. Louis and S. F. and Lehigh valley.

Post & Flagg: It looks like a continuation of the present market.

Block Maloney: If we get anything encouraging from Europe we should see a broader market.

Harris Winthrop & Co.: Rails, sooner or later, will become more prominent.

Clarke-Childs & Co.: Good rails, and steels are a buy on every recession.

Logan & Bryan: Indications are of more opposition on bulges.

Thomson McKinnon: Technically, the condition goes backward as the market goes forward.—Lamson.

BUTTER MARKET UNCHANGED

Unusually Steady During Week Ending February 24.

Butter prices unchanged nearly all week: From the standpoint of prices the butter market during the week ending February 24th were unusually steady and free from senational changes. Price changes up until late in the week were confined to minor fluctuations and these changes did not indicate a definite trend either to a higher or lower level. At Boston and Philadelphia there were slight advances while in New York and Chicago small reductions were effected.

After effects of cold weather felt: A clear picture of the markets, however, cannot be gotten from a study of prices alone. There were important changes in sentiment, the relation of prices at the different markets was such that future price changes might be expected and some new factors played a part in determining the course of the markets. Back of all this, the weather was undoubtedly principally responsible for the new features. Due to the more severe weather of recent weeks, dealers anticipated firmer markets, and some advances were registered during the previous week but the extent of the influence of the weather was not known. Reports were conflicting. Some expected further advances while others anticipated the arrival of delayed shipments with accompanying weak markets. Generally speaking, the trade had no fixed opinions and after the initial advance of the week before was prepared to meet a change in prices in either direction.

Markets steady to firm; undertone unsettled: Thus, as the week under review opened we find the markets firm on the surface but with a very unsettled undertone. At New York receipts were not as light as was expected. Neither was trading quite as heavy as the week before. Dealers continued their policy of free selling and buyers, while they bought somewhat ahead of their immediate needs, were prepared to restrict their operations as soon as advances were asked. Stocks were considerably reduced during the week but were still ample and the market the whole week could best be described as steady with an uncertain undertone. At Boston there was a good clearance of supplies under generally firm conditions but the undertone there was also somewhat unsettled. Philadelphia at times had more fancy butter than could quickly be disposed of but no material accumulations resulted and at the close the market was just about steady. On all markets there was considerable complaint of poor quality with salvy body, crumbly body and frozen cream the outstanding defects. Despite this, the undergrades were most readily cleaned up, with fancy butter and the medium grades following in the order named.

Keen demand for centralized carlots in Chicago for delivery on February contracts: With the exception of centralized carloats the market in Chicago was much the same as the eastern markets, that is, steady with an unsettled undertone. Both supplies and demand were probably a little lighter. Under the relatively high level of prices in Chicago the eastern markets attracted much of Chicago's shipping business which accounts for the lighter demand. The centralized car market presented a different situation. During January and early February considerable quantity of this class of butter (both storage and fresh) were sold for February delivery which when the winter weather shortened production and crippled transportation, became so scarce that many of the sellers anticipated difficulty in making deliveries. The result was a keen demand for carloats of centralized and a rapid advance in prices to a point even above the highest scores of butter not deliverable on these contracts. Despite the fact that the high prices attracted a large proportion of the carlot centralized outlet (89-90 score the only scores deliverable) demand continued active and the markets much in sellers favor. The effect of this condition on the other markets is best illustrated by the report that cars of 90 score centralized weer purchased in New York for shipment back to Chicago.

when they should stand a test of 4,000 pounds per square inch.

The governor said the commission could cancel its contract any time it desires to do so, but he thinks the price of the stone is the main question. In regard to the quality the governor said the corner stone is said to be the only one in the outer walls that comes up to the grade which the commission contracted for. There is only a small amount of stone now on the ground and if this is not up to grade it will be the contractor's loss and not the state's loss. The state is fully protected by its contract.

Mr. Johnson's report is interpreted to mean that there is a difference of only $20,000 in the market value of the stone to be used in the first section of the building which is now under contract. His report mentions a difference of $115,000, but this is said to cover the entire building.

MUST PAY $20,000 FOR KISS

Dr. Mitchell of Chicago Loses Case in Which Nurse Sued Him.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Dr. Justine L. Mitchell must pay $20,000 to Miss Mathilde Benkhadrt, a nurse, for an unwelcome kiss, a jury here decided today.

The kiss was purloined in the maternity ward of the German Deaconess hospital in 1921.

Miss Benkhardt asked $25,000 damages. She claimed she was discharged from the hospital following the affair. The nurse testified her suit was not an attempt to extort money but to prove the physician was a "debaucher of women."

KIDNAPED FROM A CAFE

Guests of Chicago Place Terrified by Abduction and Shooting of Unknown Man.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Early morning revelers at Colosimo's noted cafe were thrown into a panic today by the kidnaping and shooting of an unidentified man.

The man, sitting alone at one of the tables, was seized by four men who dashed into the restaurant at 5 a. m. They dragged their victim to the sidewalk, where four shots were fired.

The limp body was dragged into an automobile, which sped away.

A panic was caused among guests in the cabaret by the shots.

The victim was said to be a man under twenty-five.

LAUNCHES FARMER COMBINE

Townley Is Head of New Movement to Control Production and Stabilize Farm Prices.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 24.—A nationwide combine of farmers to control production and stabilize agricultural prices was launched here today with A. C. Townley, founder of the Nonpartisan league, as its head.

Seventy-five farmers from the northwest states are the originators of the new national producers alliance, declared to be a non-partisan organization.

Martial law has been declared in Bochum, says a dispatch to the Central News, in consequence of disturbances in which French with fatal results.

LIQUOR LAWS BEING OBEYED

sensed possible embarrassments. First, the embassies and legations watch each other carefully and there is no telling when one of them would be the means of telling about the gift-giving of the other. Broadly speaking, the giving of wines and liquors to American officials by their embassy friends is not practiced for any particular purpose, but there is always the chance that the influence of foreign governments might be exerted thru such indirect methods on pending legislation or on acts of departmental officials. Congress itself has never taken official cognizance of this, but recently there have been resolutions introduced inquiring of the department of state as to the amount of liquor permitted to enter he United States for use in embassies and legations. Such information is intended to develop whether a reasonable or unreasonable supply is being imported.

Then there is the question of whether the imported supply may be used in an embassy for entertainment purposes and for the ambassador's own table, or whether it can be delivered to the homes, flats and apartments of the dozens of lesser attaches who are usually included in the privileges of diplomatic immunity on the theory that they and their effects are a part of the embassy household. Congress may some day seek to restrict the meaning of diplomatic immunity in the United States but the chances are the department of state will voluntarily work out the problem with the embassies and legations so there will be no need of publicity or controversy in congress.

Washington Not a "Dry" City.

Washington itself is not a "dry" city in the sense that western municipalities are. Being close to Maryland where there is not even a state enforcement act and where the governor is a "wet," the opportunities for the liquor traffic are almost the same as in other eastern cities. Some of the biggest raids of the prohibition era have been staged in the national capital. Moonshine from the Virginia hills comes in regularly. More deceptions are practiced here, perhaps, than elsewhere. "Bootleggers" who have gathered up empty bottles used by the embassies boldly proclaim that they are selling embassy liquor or else they pretend they have imported their goods thru embassy influence.

Recent investigation of dozens of samples bought from "bootleggers" in the District of Columbia revealed the usual amount of diluted whisky and poisoned substances. So far as the non-official class is concerned, it is as much the victim of the "bootlegger" trade as the population of any other city on the Atlantic seaboard, tho the police here are more active in pursuing "bootleggers" than is the case in other cities.

As for the official class, the prohibition organizations are trying by every subtle means in their power to persuade those higher up to set an example and practice self-restraint so that the cry of hypocrisy raised outside of Washington shall not impede the development of a public sentiment thruout the nation.

There are, of course, those who believe that as the national capitol tightens up and liquar gets scarcer and scarcer the ruling class will be more appreciative of the demands of the populace for a light beverage for table use. Whatever be the result of law enforcement or obedience to the law on the part of those who make and administer thelaws of America, the big development of the hour is that officials high and low are waking up to the fact that the eyes of the nation are turned on them and that the gossip of the past accuses them of failing to practice what they preach. Under such circumstances the inevitable tendency is to drink less conspicuously or not at all, and the absence of good liquor is making the latter a matter of necessity rather than choice.

These bills provide for reducing the number of state employes one hundred and fifty from the number employed by the state last year to conduct its business.

If your taxes are to be reduced, if these unnecessary tax-eaters are to be dropped from the pay roll, it will be necessary for the bills to be passed by this legislature that I have introduced. This is a representative form of government. You elected a governor and members of the state legislature to carry out your wishes. These bills which I have drafted, which provide for the saving of $9,000,000 and a reduction of one hundred and fifty in the number of employes, I believe, represent a majority of the sentiment of the taxpayers of Nebraska. The members of the legislature I feel sure will carry out the wishes of the majority of their constituents if they are informed of what the majority wants.

The legislative program which I have laid before the legislature is either in the interest of the taxpayer or it is against him. Every taxpayer in Nebraska should immediately write the members of the legislature from their respective districts and notify them whether they want them to support the program which I have laid before the legislature for tax reduction or whether you want them to oppose it. If you are in favor of tax reduction and reducing the unnecessary number of employes, you should immediately write your member of the legislature and tell him to support the bills. If you are not in favor of reducing the taxes $9,000,000 and discharging the unnecessary state employes, then you should immediately write your members of the legislature and tell them to oppose the bills which I have introduced for tax reduction, etc. It is now the taxpayer's time to be heard. You must either tell your member of the legislature to vote for the bills that Governor Bryan has introduced or you must be contented with two more years of high taxes.

I want to know whether I will represent the majority of the taxpayers of Nebraska or not when I urge upon the legislature the importance of passing these bills which reduce the cost of government $9,000,000 or whether I am not in accord with what the people of the state want. I urge every person who reads this statement to immediately write a postcard to your member of the legislature and to tell him whether you want him to vote for the bills to reduce taxes as introduced by Mr. Bryan or whether you want him to vote against the bills introduced by Governor Bryan.

I urge you also to immediately call up your neighbors and ask them to notify by postcard or letter the members of the legislature whether they want the bills introduced by Governor Bryan to reduce taxes supported or whether they want the members of the legislature to oppose them. I then urge you to send me a copy of the letter or postcard that you write to your members of the legislature so that I will know whether I am carrying out your wishes or not when I try to reduce your taxes and put the state government on a business basis. The decision is in your hands. The result will be what you want it to be. I am now asking for a referendum vote of the taxpayers of Nebraska, and I urge you to immediately take action either for or against my plan to reduce the taxes $9,000,000 and to discharge one hundred and fifty unnecessary employes that are riding on the taxpayers' backs.

Write at once to your members of the legislature and to me and tell us what you want. Address letters to Lincoln, Nebraska, state house.

OPPOSED TO FREE PASSES

affairs of the organization. Hearty support was pledged to the new state officers.

The association refused to join in a fight for a change of postal rates. It was the judgment of the representatives of the weekly papers that this would further prove an encroachment upon their field by the city dailies. It was advised that the secretary give his entire time and attention to the members whose dues and other obligations are fully paid. Members who use the ready print service were recommended to use the Atlas service.

Three silver cups appropriately inscribed were presented as special prizes. One cup went to the Fremont Evening Tribune for the greatest service. For the best editorial in a country newspaper the prize was won by the Wayne Herald. For the best front page, by the Cedar County News. This is the first time that such special prizes have been offered. The cups will be held by the winners until the next annual convention. The silver cups will figure in all future meetings. The members of the committee making the awards were J. E. Lawrence and Prof. M. M. Fogg and Will Owen Jones.

In presenting the financial review, J. P. O'Furey said the attendance was 25 per cent and the increase in financial receipts 25 per cent more than at any other convention. He indicated that the past presidents have grown strong enough now to organize a past president's association. This will be accomplished at the 1924 convention. The new president, J. S. Kroh, in a short address said that the efficiency of the association was not so much due to the officers as to the loyalty and interest of the rank and file of the membership. The revision of the constitution to conform with the incorporation of the Nebraska Press association was left to a committee to make such recommendations at the 1924 convention. Edgar Howard in a characteristic speech presented J. P. O'Furey a jewel to commemorate the fact that he is now a past president.

CHINESE GOING AHEAD.

PEKING.—(By Mail.)—Chinese business men are rapidly taking control of the import and export business of the country, according to statistics compiled by the customs service. Unless foreigners look to their affairs they will eventually be taking only the leavings. Instead of buying large quantities of goods thru agents in China, some of the larger Chinese manufacturers are going into the foreign markets themselves and handling their own shipments. Chinese agents in America, England and Europe are now able to satisfy Chinese buyers and they are increasing their business.

WORLD LEAGUE OF FARMERS.

GENEVA.—(By Mail.)—League of nations circles have just given their full approval of the project launched by Victor Boret, former French minister of agriculture and president of the French national society for the encouragement of agriculture, for the organization of an "International Agraire."

CORK, Feb. 24.—The government's great roundup of republicans was in full swing today. Among those taken was John Lynch, a general of the irregulars, who is a brother of Liam Lynch, de Valera's right hand man.

PLANS FOR A BUSY SEASON

BURLINGTON TO PLACE NEW STEEL ON 175 MILES.

Shop and Power Plant Improvements to Be Made at Several Rail Terminals During the Next Ten Months.

The Burlington railroad will place 175 miles of new ninety pound steel on its lines west of the Missouri river during the year to come. Much of the steel taken up from the main lines will be relaid on the branch lines, a great deal of ballast work will be done and some grade improvement. This is about the average yearly amount of new steel to be laid. It will be laid in spots on the main lines where it is most needed.

No new depots are provided in the new budget, just approved. Of course emergencies might arise which would make the building of new depots necessary but none have been provided for.

The Burlington during the year to come will continue its policy of strengthening its shop and power plants. Last year extensive improvements were made at Lincoln, McCook and Alliance. This year Wymore, Sheridan and Casper are slated for considerable expenditures of money and additional improvements will be made at McCook.

The usual amount of bridge work will be carried on during the season to come, some substantial change for permanency being on the list. Money spent has been planned to increase the capacity of the road to handle business.

ARNSTEIN IS OFFERED BAIL

FIVE OTHER MEN ARRESTED WITH BOND PLOTTER.

Group in New York Seized When They Are Unable to Account for Bonds and Securities in Possession.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Bail of Nicky Arnstein, convicted "master mind" of a $5,000,000 bond plot, and of five others arersted when police said they failed to account for bonds in their possession, was increased to $10,000 each by Magistrate Levine today.

The six had been released earlier in the day on $2,500 bond each. Albert Wilson, a Cleveland broker, failed to appear at the hearing at which the bond was increased, and the magistrate swore out a bench warrant for him.

Eugene S. McGee, his counsel, declared, however, that he can produce Wilson, who was one of those arrested when the bonds were found in the room o fthe men arrested in a Broadway hotel. Levine refused to heed the promise and took the bench action.

The five men, who were taken by detectives at a Broadway hotel with a woman who was later released, were charged with grand larceny. Those arrested with Arnstein are:

Edward M. Fuller, thirty-nine, awaiting trial on bucketing charges following failure of the firm of E. M. Fuller and company for $5,000,000.

Albert Wilson, forty, Cleveland, a broker.

Albert E. Cleveland, a broker.

Samuel Milton Small, twenty-two, New York, known as "the boy broker."

Harry Sykes, thirty-one, New York, said by police to have been a stock salesman for M. Stielitz and company which failed for more than $100,000 and whose head, Stielitz, killed himself while awaiting trial.

WALT MASON

Sometimes, when I have diseases circulating thru my frame, and the prospect dark displeases, and I'm weary of the game, I indulge in gloomy wheezes, to my everlasting shame. But my grouch is never lasting, and I cheer up pretty soon, cutting out the rude dodgasting, to pur up a cheerful tune; from my heart the sorrow casting, sipping bitters from a spoon. For my illness is a blessing to a lot of worthy guys; there's the druggist, who is messing with his pills of noble size; in his heart he is confessing that in me his safety lies. And the doc has seven nieces he must dress in proper style; his expense no doubt increases, doubles every little while; as I rub my limbs with greases I reflect on this and smile. Scores of earnest, honest critters, gather yarbs on plains and hills, to compound my wholesome bitters, and my death defying pills, and I seem to hear their twitters when I pay my monthly bills. And when death, the grisly raker, rakes me to my last repose, and I go to yonder acre where the weeping willow grows, then the weeping undertaker will be richer, I suppose. If I helped the learned physician, and the druggist, wise and true, if I aid the tired mortician and the yarb assembling crew, it is idle my condition to lament with loud boo-hoo.

QUACKS FOLLOW COUE VISIT

Many Arrested in Chicago Attempting to Get Money Thru Auto-Suggestion.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24. — Warning against "a wave of medical quackery" following the visit of Emile Coue, teacher of healing by auto-suggestion was issued today, by John W. Follmer, chief inspector for the Illinois department of registration and education.

"Many fakes have aped the methods of the Nancy druggist," Follmer said, "obtaining large sums from patents."

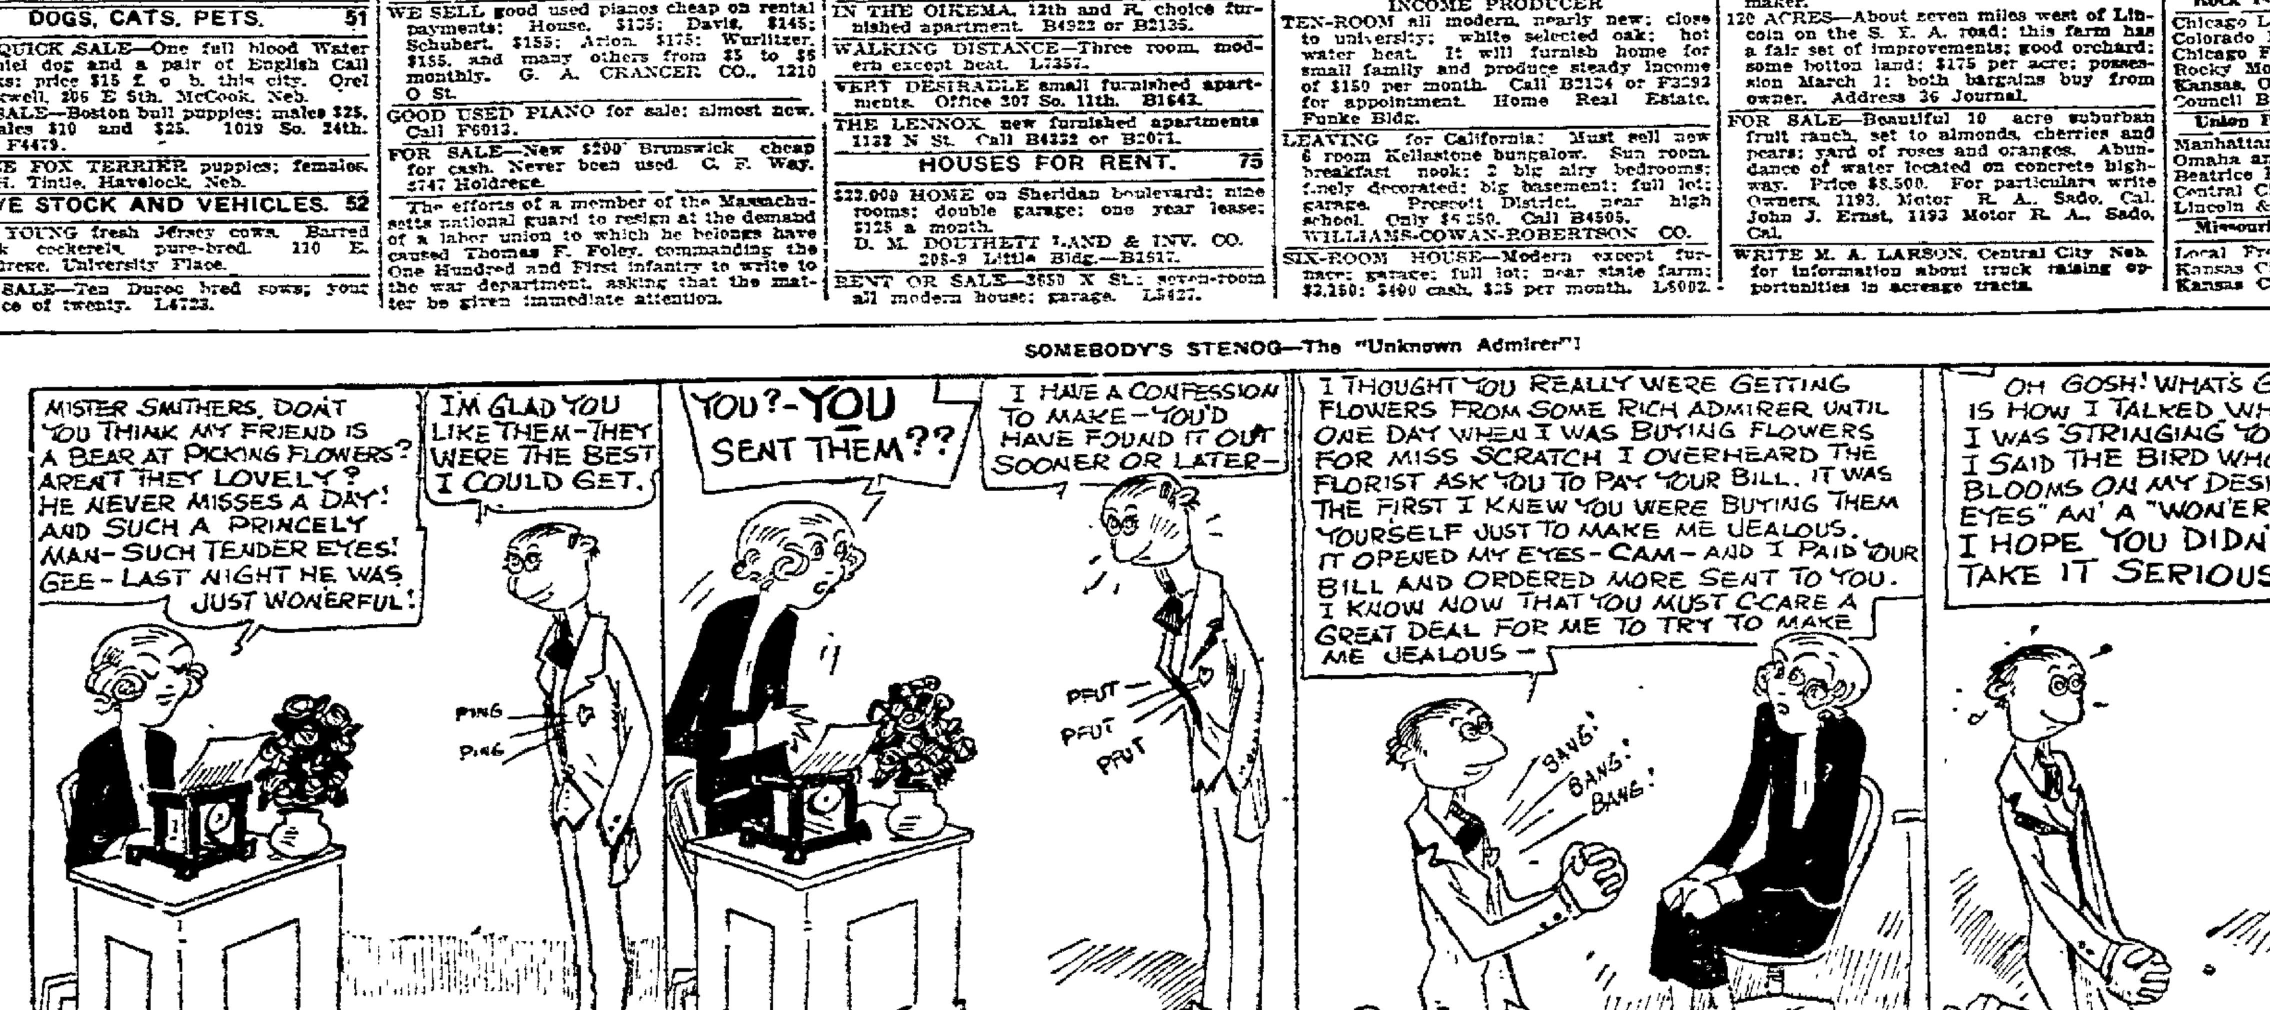

During the week more than a score of medical quacks who were attempting to get money thru healing by auto-suggestion, have been arrested in Chicago after investigation by Follmer.

MEN AND THINGS

It is not out of order to suggest that if the governor can prove that his plan of operating the state government will save nine millions in taxation, it will not be necessary for the people to petition the legislature to adopt it The legislators have given ample proof that they appreciate the fact that they have a mandate from the people to save money wherever they can do it without impairing the efficiency of the state government. Reduction in taxes, it is quite evident to all who have a fairly intimate knowledge of state affairs, can be accomplished only in two ways, eliminating departments which it is agreed can be dispensed with and cutting down appropriations for those that are absolutely necessary. Indiscriminate slashing merely to get the total down to a desired figure might easily prove disastrous.

The packers and cattlemen are much concerned over the fact that the consumption of meat in this country is decreasing on the per capita basis. The decline is not so great as it was, but still large enough to cause them uneasiness In 1900 the per capita consumption was 181 5 pounds. The last figures show it to be 156.2 pounds Multiply that decrease by 110 millions, and you can understand why the alarm is felt in producing circles. They say it is the result of the crusade during the war for eating less meat. They might add that recovery to the former per capita has been delayed by the failure of incomes to increase as rapidly as living expenses.

The most discouraging feature of the European outlook is the apparent inability of the people to make their own ideas of things count with their governments. These are still in the hands of the politicians, who pursue the old style diplomacy, with all of its lyings and deception, backed by a desire to get the better of the other fellow lured into a conference With that condition prevailing no wonder these conferences fail. Ignorant leadership of the people would, of course, be disastrous, but surely there are enough intelligent educated men in the various countries thru whom public sentiment could be made effective in their governments.

One of the really difficult things about writing is to condense what one has to say on any given subject Perhaps that is one reason why men who are expected to make brief speeches find it impossible to bring their offerings under that title Perhaps that is one reason why the oldtime editors could not get much more than started before turning the first column. It takes time to say things briefly. Some orators write out what they desire to say, and then condense it. The less a man has to say the more time and space he demands. The reason is not difficult to understand. It takes time to mold an idea into its most effective form. If you have only fifteen minutes' worth of ideas to express take only fifteen minutes in which to do it,

It is remarkable how persistent the idea clings to legislative minds that it is impossible to legislate morals into individuals, and that all the laws in the world won't make them any better personally. Stated as a bald proposition it looks to be true, yet the history of legislation is filled with proofs to the contrary. The criminologists bear witness also. They say that the greater per cent of the criminals are morons, and that the easiest influenced person is a moron. The thou-shalt-nots of the law are intended to create conditions in which it is easier to live a decent, respectable life than the other kind of a life. Passing a law, it may be admitted, does not instantly regenerate the individual, but there can be no doubt of a vast change being effected in the course of time with opportunity and incentive to do evil barred.

A college professor in New York, impressed with the criticism of newspapers, made an investigation, and he says that if crime news is what newspaper readers want, the newspapers are not giving it to them. He found that 4 per cent of the space only was devoted to this kind of news, and expressed the conclusion that the "thing simmers down to the fact that people who deplore the prevalence of crime news are the very ones who read that matter first." For that reason it bulks large on their minds. Here is what he found: Business and finance, 30 per cent; sports, 10 to 15 per cent; government and politics, 9 to 11 per cent; labor, 2 to 8 per cent; deaths, 3 per cent; courts, liquor, agriculture and miscellaneous averaging about 2 per cent; foreign matters, 8 to 10 per cent; educational, 8 to 11 per cent.

BRAIN TESTS

(By Sam Loyd)

5 Minutes to Answer This.

An old-time stage manager was telling of his ingenius method of producing the mob scene in "Julius Caesar" by marching a handful of supernumeraries around and around the back scene.

"How many were in the circle?" we asked "I don't recall exactly," he replied, "but I was in the procession and I noticed that four-fifths of those who trotted ahead of me added to one-quarter of those who followed behind me, equaled our total number"

Of course, the old fellow knew he was springing a puzzle, for from his statement we are expected to figure out just how many men constituted that Roman mob.
